St. Joan of Arc Ups and Downs in History Scarcity and Extortion And Government Folly

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1920, Star Co.

On the last day of this month, four hundred and eighty-nine years ago, Joan of Arc was burned alive at Rouen as sorceress and witch. Thousands yelled with delight as she was led to the stake where flames destroyed her body, but not her courage.

She died very bravely. Declaring that the voices that led her to save France had not deceived her, and with the name of Jesus the last word on her lips.

This to the superstitious mob was strange in one burned as a sorceress. Some thought perhaps they had made a mistake, and the executioner cried, "I have committed an unpardonable sin."

Gone to his reckoning long since, he knows whether or not the sin was unpardonable, we don't know.

But we do know that the secretary of the English King that delivered Joan of Arc to be burned was something of a prophet. The secretary said, "We are lost, we have burned a saint."

History has vindicated his judgment.

Joan was made a saint officially, with all the authority of the church, two days ago.

Fifteen years after she was burned Joan's reputation was restored by the Pope, who revoked the verdict that pronounced her a sorceress and witch, thus condemning the action of the University of Paris and Pierre, that had demanded her execution, and of the English who bought Joan from John of Luxembourg and Burgundy, by whom she had been captured.

It is an old story, now happily ended in the right way, verifying once more the lines that reconcile us to the sorcery of others, not so comforting, perhaps, while you are being burned:

"Right forever on the scaffold.
Wrong forever on the throne.
But the scaffold guards the future
And behind the great unknown
Sitteth God within the shadow
Keeping watch above his own."

In all events, ancient and modern, there is useful suggestion. The sad death of Joan of Arc should do a good deal to encourage cremation, the common sense, scientific method of disposing of dead bodies, infinitely preferable to burying them out of sight, as other animals are buried.

Some object to cremation on the ground that it destroys individuality.

It has not destroyed Joan of Arc's individuality. She was burned, her ashes were thrown into the River Seine, and by this time have probably been washed into the English Channel and out into the Atlantic Ocean.

But Joan of Arc has monuments everywhere, especially in the hearts of the French. And at the last day the power that knows everything will be able to find Joan of Arc and deal with her justly, as easily as though she had been buried in a respectable graveyard, with a neat headstone to help the angel Gabriel to identify her.

King Mausolus himself, original man with the first-class funeral, after whom everybody's "mausoleum" is named, has no such identity as Joan, who never had any funeral.

The magnificent tomb Queen Artemisia built in honor of her husband Mausolus, long since fell in ruins. What is left of it was taken by the English and is now in the British Museum. Perhaps the ghost of Mausolus hovers around at night, waiting for some onlia board or Sir Oliver Lodge to help him express indignation.

Dr. Manning, director of the United States Bureau of Mines, says we shall soon have a fuel oil famine. He may be right—or wrong. There is enough oil in the shell rock of Colorado alone to last the world for five hundred years. Some one may find a way to utilize that oil before the various oil monopolies get the public's last dollar.

But if the United States supply of oil is to be exhausted, the fact should arouse the government to something more than talk.

Isn't it possible to stop the criminal waste of oil and gas wells on fire, and "gushers" running to waste—struck by lightning without knowledge or power to control the oil?

If an oil famine is coming, should not the government regulate the extortion that will be made easier by the announcement of the director of mines?

That announcement by itself

Miss Zimerman Tells of Trying to Kill Herself by Gas

Springfld, May 18.—Fear that Dr. Henr Zimmerman would kill her for tleatening to reveal their relations h Miss Sadie Feldman prompted Jennie G. Zimmerman to shoot lm, she testified today.

The young woman, who is on trial for the murder of the doctor, a distant cousin, said that she had previously purchased a revolver after he threatened to blow her brains out, and that on one attempted suicide by gas poisoning, but was prevented by her sister.

These statements, featuring the testimony of the defendant, proved fully as tramatic to the crowded courtroom as her pitiful story the previous day of her betrayal by Dr. Zimmerman.

While describing the shooting of the doctor on Ferry street, beside the automobile in which was the girl Miss Zimmerman thought he was going to murry, the young woman became hysterical and it was some minutes before she could resume her testimony.

SAW DOCTOR WITH GIRL.

She told of seeing the doctor seated in the machine with one of the Feldman girls at the wheel, and how she asked him if she might speak to him. They walked to the rear of the machine, Miss Zimmerman stated, and once more she asked if he were going to do anything for her. Again he said, "No." He testified, and continued her not to talk so loud.

"I said to him 'I am going to have you arrested,' and he said: 'Go as far as you like.' I said: 'I will tell that girl what kind of a fellow you are.' He said: 'Don't you dare to tell her anything or I'll blow your brains out.'

"He turned and walked away to get into the automobile," continue Miss Zimmerman, "and I saw him put his hand around to his back pocket. I had a feeling that I had to protect myself. I don't remember anything else until I came to in the police station."

In these words the young woman described her conception of the crime for which she is now on trial, a crime

FORMER POLICEMAN TO FACE THE GRAND JURY

John L. McNally, who resigned from the Boston police force under fire a few days ago, was held for the grand jury today on charges of misconduct with a fifteen-year-old girl, following a hearing in Municipal Court. McNally was one of the new members of the department, attached to Station 2. The girl, on whose story McNally is to be prosecuted, is Rosa Shannon, otherwise Ida Lewis, of Hudson street. It is charged that McNally met the girl when she was in the station as a shoplifter.

Crawl in Window to Evict Widow

A story of ejectment proceedings told to the Mayor's Renting and Housing Committee today moved that body to describe the treatment accorded the tenant as outrageous, and resulted in a sharp rebuke for the methods used by Constable St. Clair H. Richardson.

The tenant is a widow with four children, the oldest a boy of thirteen years. The widow is employed in a department store. When she returned to her home on Norfolk street, Dorchester, yesterday, she found her children in tears on the steps, her food supply thrown in the streets, and every article of her furniture taken from the home.

The woman told the committee that she was in arrears for one month and seventeen days, but had been that much behind before and always paid up. She said her rent had been increased from $18 to $25, and that she received a salary of $15 a week. On this she supported herself and her four children.

The widow said that she had received no eviction notice, nor summons to court. Her son told her that the men had entered through a window, and when he had told them to call her up, giving his mother's number, they refused to go to the telephone.

Richardson, the constable who had charge of the ejectment proceedings, denied the charges made by the widow, and said he served an ejectment notice by dropping it into the woman's letter box.

The officer said he had not entered through the window himself, but one of the truck drivers had gone through. When asked what redress the widow would have if any of her jewelry or property was taken, the constable said she could bring suit against the storage company which now holds her furniture.

Herbert E. Ellis, of the committee said: "Law or no law, this is an outrageous proceeding. I do not see why some adjustment cannot be made to prevent cases of this kind and to stop tenants being thrown into the street."

The woman said she and her children had slept with neighbors and relatives last night.

30 AUTOISTS PAY COURT $150

Plead Guilty to Approaching East Boston Corner Without Sounding Horns

A crusade against automobile law violators by the East Boston police resulted today in the arraignment of thirty autoists in the East Boston Court. They all pleaded guilty to approaching an intersecting street without sounding their horns and paid fines of $5 each.

Five of the thirty also pleaded guilty to driving without carrying their registration certificates. These cases were placed on file.

The crusade was instituted by Captain James F. Hickey following complaints that automobile drivers disregard the safety of pedestrians at the corner of Breed and Bennington streets, near the entrance to the Orient Heights station of the Narrow Gauge Railroad.

INSTRUCTOR AND PUPIL DRIVERS ARE FINED

Charged with reckless driving, Joseph Catamese, forty-three years old, of Windsor street, Cambridge, was fined $100, and Donato Larusso, twenty-three years old, of Margaret street, Boston, $50 by Judge Thomas in Cambridge District Court. It is alleged that on the evening of May 8, Larusso was teaching Catamese the operation of a motor truck, which jumped to the sidewalk at Harvard and Columbia streets, Cambridge, killing 75-year-old Michael W. Houlahan.

SEEKS AID TO CHECK COLLAPSE

Commission Asks Officials Here to Help Solve Railway Problem

The Interstate Commerce Commission today appealed to the Public Utilities Department for its advice and cooperation to smash the freight tieup.

It may be necessary, the commission said, for itself to take absolute charge of the operation of all the railroads, including the allocation of cars and the routing of freight. It said in a telegram to the State Department:

"Carriers generally have appealed to Interstate Commerce Commission to use its mandatory powers under section 402 of the transportation act in the present emergency due to car shortage, traffic congestion and labor troubles. We must have precise and accurate information as to situation and are obtaining this through our inspectors and from carriers.

"Desire your co-operation in getting accurate view of situation. Wish you would send me wire daily, if necessary, what situation is in your State, where trouble exists or service is inadequate, with specific recommendation as to remedy. This must be looked at as national, not merely local matter.

"CLYDE HIBBON, Commissioner."

The Chamber of Commerce today received a telegram from C. L. Bardo, of the traffic department of the New Haven, urging the merchants to unload their cars as quickly as they received them to help avert a national traffic disaster.

Coolidge Replies to 'Aristocrat' Crocker

Taking sharp issue with George U. Crocker, who attacked "the fetish of democracy" as the essence of mediocrity, Governor Coolidge today sounded the praises of democracy and cited the brotherhood of man.

In direct contradiction of Mr. Crocker's charge that democracy meant Socialism, and that the people needed to be "aristocratized," the Governor said that the "foundation of democracy is the recognition of the inherent nobility of all men."

He added that all men partake of the Divine nature, being "equal in kind, but having different talents."

The Governor's statement, given the Boston American, was the result of a letter written by Mr. Crocker, former city treasurer, to Professor Dallas Lore Sharp of Boston University, condemning a recent article by the latter, entitled "Patrons of Democracy."

In this letter, made public by Professor Sharp, Mr. Crocker said that democracy meant government by the "whim of Demos, and equality between the competent and incompetent." Aristocracy on the other hand, he claimed meant, "selection, struggle, self-reliance, order, equality of opportunity and a recognition of a sovereign power."

He also said that he himself had

Supreme Court Acts in Case of Dentist Imprisoned for Jewel Robbery

Dr. Joseph Homer, a dentist convicted by a jury in Superior Court in 1918 of robbery at the Hotel Touraine of Mrs. Madge E. Wilbur, and sentenced to from two and one-half to four years in State prison, today was granted a new trial by the full bench of the Supreme Court.

At the trial Mrs. Wilbur testified the dentist robbed her of jewels worth jewels at the point of a gun in a room at the Hotel Touraine.

STRIKE AT LYNN ELECTRIC PLANT

100 Turbine Winders Quit Work; 1,000 Machinists Vote to Walk Out

One hundred turbine winders at the General Electric Company plant in Lynn struck today, the first of 15,000 employes, all of whom are expected to go out before the end of the week.

One thousand machinists at a meeting in Odd Fellows' Hall voted unanimously to strike as a protest against methods inaugurated by the company, and other strike votes will be taken tonight and tomorrow night.

The turbine winders walked out when twenty "time cards" system men, armed with stop watches and sliding scales, took their places beside the workmen in building 62 today. The employes declared they had begun to time operations, and as a result a reduction would be made in the prices paid for piece work.

The company's threat to lay off 1,500 to 2,500 employes was characterized as a "fake" by the workers, who declared that there was no truth in the statement that railroad congestion had prevented the receipt of raw materials. Employes declare that there are plenty of raw materials at the plant, and point to the fact that advertisements have been inserted in the newspapers of Boston and other cities requesting employes who need labor to go to Lynn.

BRICE S. EVANS, NOT "CHICK," BEFORE COURT

The Boston American in a late edition yesterday printed a paragraph stating that "Brice S. Evans, better known as 'Chick,' the famous left-handed Western golf champion, appeared in the Newton Court today charged with being intoxicated." The American wishes to explain that the Evans who was in court was not "Chick" Evans, the Western golf champion, but was Brice S. Evans, another golf player.

"Chick" Evans, as is well known, is a man of fine character. His friends realize how impossible it is that such a charge could be made against him. The American regrets publication of anything which might tend to implicate him in any court proceedings.

BOSDAN IS HELD IN $5,000 FOR GRAND JURY

James J. Bosdan of Newton, alleged to have stolen government documents from the records of the Dean murder case, appeared before United States Commissioner Hayes today. Through his counsel, Clarence A. Barnes, Bosdan waived examination and was held in $5,000 bail for the Grand Jury. His wife furnished the bail.

SUSPEND LIEUTENANT ON REVERE FORCE

Lieutenant Carroll Davis of the Revere Police Department was today suspended for fifteen days for being absent without leave. Charges were preferred against the lieutenant by Chief Dyer, who said that as a trip to Akron, O., Davis stayed five days too long, and that on his return he did not report for duty for two more days.

DEMANDS PROBE OF TAX RETURNS OF 'BIG BUSINESS'

Washington, May 18.—Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts warned both old parties today that their failure to pass measures to reduce living costs was turning thousands to radicalism.

In a carefully prepared speech, eloquently delivered, the junior Massachusetts Senator held the rapt attention of the chamber for nearly two hours.

It was generally accepted as a warning that Senator Walsh intends to lead the fight in the Democratic national convention to make the high cost of living the paramount issue of the presidential campaign.

A far reaching Senatorial investigation of income tax returns and their relation to profiteering was demanded by Senator Walsh.

He said he believed if the "Full Light of Publicity" were shed upon the income tax returns of "Big Business" the responsibility for prevailing high prices for necessaries of life would be exposed.

He declared that high costs would be a paramount issue in both conventions, and urged fellow Senators to attack the problem with determination in the next few months.

Senator Walsh said in part:

"Mr. President, is there danger, as many allege, of the collapse of our political and parliamentary institutions and the substitution therefor of the industrial state? That there is today, for the first time in America, an agitation for such a proposition cannot be disputed.

SEETHING WITH DISCONTENT

"Personally, I do not believe there is any real danger of the majority of our people accepting such doctrines, but I do believe from evidence which is constantly appearing in the newspapers and periodical press of the country, from information which has come to me from Massachusetts, and from evidence to which I have listened before a committee of the Sergeant Charles Maynes of the Dorchester Division, the oldest sergeant in the Boston police department, today announced his retirement after thirty-nine years of service. He was appointed a patrolman December 19, 1881, and was made a sergeant on December 24, 1890.

SUGAR EMBARGO IS DEMANDED

Necessary to Conserve Domestic Supply, Says Chief U. S. Investigator

By International News Service.

New York, May 18.—An immediate embargo on all sugar shipments from the United States was urged upon Attorney-General Palmer today by Armin W. Riley, special assistant attorney-general, in charge of profiteering investigations.

Riley telegraphed the attorney-general that an embargo was necessary to conserve domestic supplies and "keep prices within reasonable bounds."

He also suggested that Congress be asked to pass legislation permitting the Department of Justice to restrict unnecessary sales of sugar for use in luxuries such as candy and soft drinks.

Retail Advance in Sugar Looms

With the advance of one cent per pound for sugar wholesale by the refiners, Boston is confronted with the menace of an additional retail price increase, and further, with the realization that nothing has been done to stop profiteering in this commodity locally.

The retail price of sugar has not advanced in most of the stores of Greater Boston. The price remains as it has been the past four or five days, ranging from 22 to 25 cents a pound.

CASE AGAINST VICTIM OF BULLET IS CALLED

British Coat of Arms on Everett Police

The police of Everett are wearing helmets bearing on the inside the British coat of arms.

Although the coat of arms in this instance is simply a trademark, it is said that some of the men of Celtic extraction on the force object to marching beneath the sign of the British crown.

It was jokingly referred to by one officer as the first step in the Anglicisation of the Everett force.

Government to Take Control of Traffic

Washington, May 18.—The Interstate Commerce Commission today will reach a decision on the application of the railroads for a sweeping, priority order in order to relieve the transportation tie-up, Secretary McGinty stated today.

The commission today called into conference railway executives, headed by T. DeWitt Cuyler of the Railway Executives' Association. The conference was believed to be a forerunner to action by the commission.

There was some doubt whether the commission would meet all of the requests of the railroads, or would determine to meet the situation through some devices of its own.

While the commission debated details of its program the wires and mails were jammed with appeals for relief from industrial and financial quarters. Members said the commission would answer such appeals by the application of every possible remedy provided under the new law.

FOR REAL NECESSARIES.

The commission, it is understood, will provide immediately for priority movement over railroads of foodstuffs, perishable products, livestocks, fuel, newsprint paper and other essential products.

Priority is expected to be given the movement of empty freight cars, insuring their quick return to sections where they are most needed. Radical curtailment of passenger service may be necessary.

In advance of the promulgation of emergency priority orders by the commission, new instructions were issued today on practically all lines for the movement westward of grain car equipment now stalled throughout the East. Reports to the commission stated that millions of bushels of grain were held in elevators in the West long delayed in shipment because of lack of cars.

The car shortage has so seriously affected the crop movements that finacial difficulties already are imminent.

CREDITS AFFECTED.

Treasury reports from reserve bank centres today reflected acute financial disturbances growing out of the railroad tie-ups. Credits at many important centres have been greatly restricted.

Actual suspension of some factories because of shortage of fuel and raw materials was reported.

In view of the fact that the large portion of the 1919 crop has not been moved and that demands soon will be made upon the roads for the movement of the 1920 crop, officials said it probably would be necessary in the public interest to exercise emergency powers over car-distribution for many months.

George P. Hampton, director of the Farmers' National Council, today made public a letter to Chairman Clark of the Interstate Commerce Commission urging that an order be issued for the pooling of equipment and a joint or common use of terminals.

AFFECT ALL IN NATION.

Not one, but a number of nation-wide crises, each gravely affecting every man, woman and child in the country, are occupying the serious attention of the Federal government.

1—There is a coast-to-coast crisis in transportation so acute that a[n] embargo on non-essentials may be decreed by the Interstate Commerce Commission before the week is out.

2—Aggravating the situation due to a freight car shortage and further menacing the country with a complete transportation tie up comes the hint of a great strike of railway employes, whose wage demands are now pending. July 1 is the tentative date for this.

3—Officials admit that unless outside aid is forthcoming farmers throughout the country will be unable to harvest their crops at least without costly, if not fatal, delays, thus endangering supplies which the nation vitally needs, and which it depends upon the farms to produce.

4—A general shortage of certain staples regarded as certain, owing to world-wide demand and under production.

The Interstate Commerce Commission, the Railway Labor Board, the Department of Agriculture, Labor and Justice and various government bureaus are all engaged in trying to find a solution to these and kindred problems, while the President himself is watching the outcome with concern.

LABOR TROUBLE, TOO.

While there is a serious national car shortage, the transportation crisis is rendered doubly difficult owing to labor troubles. Thousands of men have stopped work or are out on strike in various sections of the country, despite the widespread impression to the contrary, while prior to the strike, so called "outlaw," it is estimated that about 200,000 unskilled railroad workmen had quit their jobs and gone to other occupations which paid more money.

It is believed here that the Railroad Labor Board will reach a decision this week on the increase in wages demanded by the railroad brotherhoods, and the impression is that their demands will be met.

Scarcity of farm labor has the Department of Agriculture worried. Officials admitted today that farmers are confronted by a labor shortage as serious as in 1918. A call has been sent out for volunteers from the universities and colleges of the country to make good the lack of hands

ADVOCATES U. S. OWNED ROADS

Ex-President Codman Declares Hub and New England Would Especially Benefit

Boston would have a chance to compete on fair terms with New York for imports and exports and all New England would be exceptionally benefited by government ownership, declares E. D. Codman, former president of the Fitchburg Railroad, in a statement today. Private ownership is a failure, says Codman, and the solution of the transportation problem and the relief of distressed industry lies in government ownership and operation of the roads.

"The American public is slow to yield to arguments for public ownership of railroads," he says. "It is situations like the present, where industries are absolutely in distress, that will finally bring our community around to the establishment of government ownership.

"It is a short period since the railroads were handed back to private ownership and a collapse has come. If, as was stated, I believe, by Mr. Hines, the railroads were in good condition at the time they were turned over to the government, it seems to me that the private administration has proved its incapacity already.

"Anyone who takes the trouble to give it a thought knows that the present method of private operation with guarantee by the government is unsound and that it makes for waste, for which the public has to pay. The private managers are bound to act in an irresponsible manner in the matter of their expenses.

"For New England, government ownership would mean an exceptional benefit. It would certainly mean a linking of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad to the Pennsylvania and the Boston & Maine to the New York Central, thus making Boston the terminus of two of the great trunk lines over the country.

U. S. Should Take Over Railways, Says Prouty

Washington, May 18.—Resumption by the government of war-time control over the railroads was urged today by Charles A. Prouty, director of valuation of the Interstate Commerce Commission, as a solution of the nation-wide collapse in transportation.

Steps have already been taken by the commission to relieve the freight congestion, under authority of the recently-enacted Cummins-Esch Act, Mr. Prouty said, but he did not believe private management had proved its incapacity to run the railroads since the government surrendered them ten weeks ago.

"Until private management had proved its inefficiency, he said he did not believe it time to advocate government ownership.

Mr. Prouty expressed the view that the collapse of the roads was due to factors beyond the control of executives and only a unification of systems and general clearance of freight would remedy the situation. He said:

"What the railroads have asked for is practically the same conditions as prevailed during the war. They have called upon the government to unify the roads. While direct operations would be in the hands of railroad executives, supervision would be exercised by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

"The railroads have broken down under the strain and only such unification and centralization of supervision can remedy conditions. The government is not to blame for present conditions. I believe the roads were surrendered to private control in as good condition as when they were taken over.

"Additional equipment is needed to meet the growth in demand for transportation service.

"There is ample law on the statute books for the Interstate Commerce Commission to take charge of the situation and a fair trial should be given before suggesting something new."

'Obey' in Marriage Service Dropped

"Obey" has gone the way of Sanlac, cords and wire. Sweet brides no longer say, Love, honor and obey.

—Bridal Ballade.

"Obey" in the marriage ceremony has been tacitly dropped by Episcopalian ministers. The ministers themselves, they say, start out by reading the service exactly as it was written some centuries ago, but when the blushing bride comes on the elimination of the hateful disyllable, the minister simply leaves it out without more ado.

The broad churchmen, while they have no rule regarding the use of the word, are not insisting on reading it into the service. Rev. Percy Stickney Grant, rector of the Church of the Ascension, New York, has gone on record that he has not used the word in the marriage ceremony for some months, while other Episcopalian ministers all over the country are following his example to save argument.

GOODS AT HALF PRICE IN OMAHA

Millions of Dollars Worth Being Sold as Stores Fight for Trade

Omaha, May 18.—Costs of clothing and hundreds of other necessaries were cut in two here today as the result of a price-cutting war in which practically every big department store in the city is involved.

Stock valued at between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000 have been dumped on the market at prices from 30 to 50 per cent. lower than those of a few days ago, and chances are that they will go lower.

The Omaha public returned with enthusiasm to the buying campaign. Hundreds of workmen remained away from work to help their wives carry home the articles bought before a truce was declared between the department store owners.

The price-cutting started yesterday, when three of the biggest stores in the city announced in page advertisements that costs of all but patented articles would be reduced 20 per cent.

The other department store managers, feeling that a march had been stolen, hurriedly placarded their windows with notices of cuts ranging from 20 to 30 per cent.

One big store refused to follow the tactics of its rivals. It had at its "busiest" hour exactly sixteen customers. It was cutting as deep as any of them today.

Reductions aggregating 50 per cent. were made in the prices of many articles when the stores reopened today. Included in the list were all sorts of men's, women's and children's clothing, hardware and musical instruments.

The most significant fact in the incident is the admission by the manager of the Brandeis store that the price-cutting involves no sacrifice, as merchandise can be replaced at lower prices.

FEARS FOR HIS LIFE, BUT GIVES TESTIMONY

Providence, R. I., May 18.—Joseph Imondi was the chief witness for the government today in the trial of the four Morelli brothers, charged with wholesale larceny from railroad freight yards. Imondi was a reluctant witness, as he told the Federal authorities that he was afraid he would be killed if he told all that he knew. He told of going to the New Haven freight yard in a truck driven by Joseph Morelli and of selling a case of shoes taken at that time for $50, his own share being $10.

PILGRIMS TRIED COMMUNISM

Found Scheme a Failure, Dr. Eliot Declared to Congregationalists

Plymouth, May 18.—The Communistic or Socialistic form of government was tried out by the Pilgrims in their colony here, and abandoned because it was not feasible, Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard, told the Massachusetts Congregational conference today.

Speaking in the Church of the Pilgrimage, Dr. Eliot said that after nearly three years the Pilgrims discovered that private property was necessary to civilization.

He added that the Catholic unions and laymen's leagues, and the world-wide religious awakening were the fruition of the Pilgrims' landing at this place and the establishment of their colony.

Seated on the platform with Dr. Eliot were: Rev. Henry N. DeBoit, a colored minister from Springfield, who spoke on "Home Missionary Work," and W. E. C. Nazro, welfare manager of the Plymouth Cordage Company.

Congregational ministers from all parts of Massachusetts were present at the conference, which will last three days.

Dr. Eliot said the Pilgrims worked four days a week, two of which were for themselves in return for the products of their labor. Their pay was in corn and they had no currency. After two and a third years, however, a change was made, as they found the original method to be unsuccessful.

PAY POOREST IN CANDY TRADE

Thousands of women employed in the candy, corset, paper box and sweater industries in Massachusetts made less than $9 a week in 1919.

This is one of a number of assertions in a statement by the Women's Trade Union League, and it is accompanied by figures. The four trades mentioned are not organized.

The candy trade is the worst paid of all. Scarcely a woman in that industry made $13 a week, according to the statement of the trade unionists. Only 4.7 per cent. of all the women in the candy trade made as high as $9.

The proportion of women in the other three trades who made under $9 a week was as follows: Corset industry, 16.8 per cent.; paper box industry, 29 per cent.; sweater industry, 35.3 per cent.

These conditions will be considered at a meeting of the Women's Trade Union League at No. 255 Boylston street tomorrow night.

ONLY EDWARDS CAN HONOR CAPT. COOPER

Captain Edwin H. Cooper, of the 26th Division, refused today to have Colonel Thomas W. Griffith, recruiting officer, pin on the distinguished service cross which Cooper was recently awarded. "I've no objection to you, colonel, but there's no man that can pin that cross on me except General Edwards," said Captain Cooper. "I served under him and that one means everything to me, when my old commander performs this function." The decoration will be pinned on in army headquarters, Saturday.

had birth, breeding and money, and "absorbed my belief in aristocracy," in the Boston Public Latin School, which taught the lesson of self reliance. The private school, Mr. Crocker added, "had the principles of 'democracy' 'pretty well' counted. The weak were helped, the capable were held back. Birth, breeding and money meant success. In the Latin School they meant nothing."

NONE WEAK OR MEAN.

"Democracy is not an attempt to make the inefficient the equal of the efficient," said Governor Coolidge. "It is an attempt to develop the best there is in every individual. It is an attempt to give to each citizen an equal opportunity to develop his own resources. Democracy strives to provide birth, breeding and money to everybody.

"The foundation of democracy is the recognition of the inherent nobility of all men. Under it none are thought to be weak and mean. There is no foundation for democracy that is not religious in its nature. The true foundation is revealed in Genesis, where it is asserted that man was created in the image of the Almighty. That makes each of us partakers of the Divine nature and establishes the brotherhood of all men, making them truly equal in kind but having different talents. They differ in degree.

"The prime object of Democracy is to recognize the aristocracy of all mankind and to seek for its full realization."

DYING LOVE OF DOCTOR IS REVEALED BY MISS ZIMMERMAN

SCOFFED AT HER, SHE SAYS

Miss Zimmerman Reveals Tragedy of Life Before Crowded Courtroom

Springfield, May 18.—In a burst of weeping that made a considerable portion of her statement unintelligible, Jennie Zimmerman today described in Superior Court what she recollected of the fatal scene last August when, by her signed confession in police records, she shot to death her cousin and alleged betrayer, Dr. Henry Zimmerman.

The spectators, deathly silent, leaned forward with strained attention to catch the girl's words, always difficult to hear because so softly spoken. This time her voice was plainly audible throughout the court room, but so choked with emotion that many of the words could not be distinguished.

A thrill of surprise swept over the audience when, immediately after, confronted with the typewritten statement bearing her signature taken immediately after the arrest, she said that she had signed without reading the contents, or any recollection that they had been read to her. "Somebody held me up in bed and told me where to sign," declared the girl. "I noticed that my name was on the paper, at the top, and spoke of it. Then I said, 'where shall I sign?' and they told me, and I signed."

DOCTOR FEARED SCANDAL.

"Had you previously told anyone," asked her counsel, "that if Dr. Zimmerman didn't do the right thing by you you would kill him?" The defendant's voice was clear and distinct as she replied, "Never."

Led by questions from Attorney McKechnie, she told of the gradual cooling of Henry's passion and the cessation of his visits, then of reproaches on his part that she had telephoned to his home and "got him in Dutch" with his family by revealing their relations; then of threats to kill her if she "made a scandal."

Fear that he would fulfill his threat led her finally to buy a revolver. But it was not only her life that she feared for, Jennie told the jury. She feared also that he would fulfill another threat to cause her to be committed to an insane asylum. And there was still another fear. She told how, when tenderness on his part had died, passion still lived; of visits to her home that began in reproaches and ended in the consummation, for the girl, of yielding to that passion; of vain efforts to bring to an end a relation no longer founded upon love or trust.

"I was determined, since he would not marry me, that these relations should stop," she declared. She had "reasoned, and talked with him," now, without means of self-protection, she had been helpless; how when her cousin spurned her, her home, he had been accustomed to enter her room.

"Where did you keep the revolver?" asked Mr. McKechnie. "In my breast; and at night, under my pillow," replied the girl.

As the story unfolded and approached the climax of the long-drawn tragedy of her life, the strained attention of spectators increased. There was a general drawing in of breath, as she told of the young physician's return from military service without coming to see her; of seeing him in a restaurant with a married woman, a scene which Jennie described with a fresh access of emotion; of accosting him on the street, the man who had been so much to her, and of his passing on the other side; finally of the moment when she met him as he sat in an automobile with a young woman unknown to her. She told how she approached the car and asked the doctor if she might speak with him; how he slighted and led her to the rear; how he scoffed when she asked him if he would do nothing for her.

BREAKS DOWN.

"I told him," she said, "that I would tell the girl in the car what I knew of a fellow he was. He said, 'Don't you dare. If you say a word to that girl I blow your brains out!' He put his hand to his back pocket. I was frightened."

Here the girl's voice rose to a falsetto of hysteria. Her face was distorted. With tears flowing she put her hand over her eyes and babbled inarticulate words. A storm of passionate sorrow, fright and nerves shook her; the thin hands trembled and clenched pitifully, in her effort at self-control. Attorney McKechnie waited a moment before asking:

"What was your next recollection?"

"Someone standing over me. I didn't know where I was."

"Did you afterward learn that it was the police station?"

"Yes. People talking. I wanted everyone to go away and leave me alone, but they kept coming and going, and talking, talking, talking."

Jennie Zimmerman as Seen While Baring Life Story

Characteristic photograph of Jennie Zimmerman, showing the accused girl as she looked while sobbing out her pitiable story of betrayal and repudiation by Dr. Henry Zimmerman, for whose murder she is on trial. Beneath the tired, toilworn features traces of comeliness can still be seen. These photographs were specially posed for the American.

which according to her story followed betrayal and refusal to make her mine by marriage.

Of the following incidents at the police station, when she signed an alleged confession, Miss Zimmerman testified she had had a faint remembrance. "I would have said 'Yes' to anything if they would only let me alone," she declared.

Previously the young woman had told of her attempt to take her own life, after a meeting with Dr. Zimmerman at her own house, during which a stormy conversation took place. On that occasion she said, he was angry and excited and she noticed that he put one hand on his hip.

"I said to him," she testified, "Henry, I should be the one to get angry and not you. I am the one who has suffered most." He refused to kiss her goodby, she said, and returned to Westhaven, where he was stopping. The following night the young woman said, when the children were asleep, she closed the windows in her room and turned on the gas. Her sister Annie discovered what had happened and entering the room turned the gas off.

The girl resumed the witness stand in her own defense today.

Physically she appeared on the verge of collapse but mentally was brighter than yesterday. She hung her head as she continued the recital of the events which she declared led up to the shooting of Dr. Zimmerman last August.

It was during one of the doctor's furloughs from Camp McClellan that he threatened to kill her, she testified. Speaking in a monotone that was hardly audible, she told of the doctor coming to see her at eleven o'clock on the night following his arrival in Springfield.

MADE ARDENT LOVE TO HER.

"The family were in bed when he arrived," she said. "I was just recovering from severe attack of illness with the influenza, and I was very weak. Harry came and sat on my bed. He told me that he had missed me greatly, and I told him too that I had missed him. He made ardent love to me.

"Later I realized that he was again responsible for my condition. I called his sister's home on the phone, but I was unable to get Hurry. I fainted when I felt that I was being neglected. I went to Mr. Balitch, an old friend of the family, and told him the whole story and he tried to reach Dr. Zimmerman, but was unable to.

TELLS OF THREAT.

"A few days later I met Harry on the street. He told me not to worry. He made an appointment to meet me that night, but he did not keep it. Two days later I met him again. He offered to get me some medicine. I told him that I would tell his family of my condition.

"You'll get me in Dutch if you do,' he said. 'If you keep bothering me I shall put you in Northampton with your mother.' Don't you dare tell my mother or father. If you do I'll blow your brains out.' He then walked away hurriedly."

She related how the letters from the doctor came fewer and fewer; how they became cooler in tone and how finally she sent her letters by registered mail to be sure that he got them.

She was shown two letters which she identified as coming from Dr. Zimmerman while he was in camp. Neither of them were signed.

The first was dated March 4, 1919. It read simply: "Enclosed find check for $50. Do not deposit any more money to my account. I will send you $150 more in a short while."

That was the only money, she testified, that she received from him.

GOT GUN FOR PROTECTION.

Miss Zimmerman then described the buying of the revolver with which she shot her cousin. The gun, she said, she bought two days before the murder in a Springfield store.

"I told the clerk," she testified, "that I wanted the revolver for my own protection."

"What did you intend to do with it?" Attorney McKechnie asked.

"I was afraid of him because he had threatened to blow my brains out."

She then told of talking the revolver home, loading all of its chambers and of hiding it under the pillow of her bed. She also described how a few days previous the shooting she called Dr. Zimmerman on the phone and told him of her condition. "For-get it,' he told me," she said. "'Does that mean,' I asked him, 'that you have shook me off and he answered, 'Yes'."

She said that she did not see or hear from him again until the murder.

Q.—How many letters did you write to him during that period? A.—About 100.

Q.—Did he reply to any of them? A.—No.

Q.—Did you have any telephone conversations with him? A.—Yes, I called him up one Sunday and asked him to come and see me.

Q.—Did he come? A.—Yes.

KNEW HE HAD GUN.

Q.—Where did he find you in the house? A.—I was upstairs in my room. I always rested on Sunday morning. My youngest sisters, Ethel and Annie, were in my room, but when the doctor came I sent them out.

Q.—What conversation did he have with you? A.—I asked him why he did not write to me, and he said not marrying me. He said he wouldn't marry me. I told him that he would have to, that he had promised to marry me and that it was his duty. This seemed to make him very angry.

I said, "Henry, I am not going to tell your mother that you are going to tell your mother and your sisters what you have done to me."

Q.—What did he say then? A.—He said: "If you start anything like that I will blow your brains out." He also said, "You are crazy."

Q.—Did he say anything about what you should do? A.—He told me I would have to go away some where.

Q.—Did you know the doctor had a revolver? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you know that he was carrying it? A.—I thought he was.

Q.—Did you notice any movement of his hands? A.—Yes, he put one on his hip.

Q.—What did you say to him? A.—I said to him, "Henry, I should be the one to get angry and not you. I am the one who has suffered most." After this he became very affectionate. This was early in March, 1919.

REFUSED TO KISS HER.

Q.—Did you ask him to kiss you goodby? A.—Yes.

Q.—What did he say? A.—He said, "No, I won't do it."

A.—Where did he go from there? A.—He returned to Westhaven.

Q.—Did you write to him at Westhaven? A.—Yes, many times.

Q.—Did you ever receive any replies? A.—No.

Q.—At any time did you attempt to commit suicide? A.—Yes.

Q.—Will you describe that? A.—It was the evening of the next day after Dr. Zimmerman and I had that meeting at my house. The children were asleep. I closed the windows in my room, and turned on the gas.

Q.—What happened then? A.—My sister Annie discovered me, came into my room and turned off the gas.

Q.—Did you continue to write to Dr. Zimmerman? A.—Yes.

Q.—What did you say to him? A.—I told him I was heartbroken, that I hoped he would marry me, because I had gone through so much for him.

Q.—When did Dr. Zimmerman come home finally? A.—Monday. It was on Monday. I think it was early in August.

Q.—Did you see him? A.—Yes, on Calhoun Heights.

Q.—Did you come in contact with each other? A.—No, I was some distance away and wagons were passing between us.

Q.—When did you next see him? A.—It was the following day. I was in a restaurant and a Mrs. Tyler, who knew us both, came up to me and said: "Look over in the corner." I did and I saw Dr. Zimmerman there with a woman.

Q.—Did you recognize the woman? A.—Yes, it was Mrs. Ethel Levine.

Q.—What were they doing? A.—They were seated close to each other and the doctor had his arm around her chair.

Q.—When was the next time you talked with Dr. Zimmerman? A.—The next day.

Q.—What did you say to him? A.—I called him up at the office of another doctor who was a great friend of his, and where I knew Dr. Zimmerman spent a great deal of his time. When Dr. Zimmerman answered the telephone I said, "Henry, this is Jennie." He replied, "Forget it!" I said to him: "Does that mean that you have shook me off?" And he said, "Yes."

Q.—Now, Jennie, did you have a talk with Mrs. Brooslin about the doctor? A.—Yes, in March I called her up and told her I was afraid that Mrs. Cornell, Dr. Zimmerman's sister, and her husband, Dr. Cornell, would have me sent to the insane asylum at Northampton.

Q.—Did you say anything to her about shooting Dr. Zimmerman? A.—No.

Q.—When did you buy the revolver? A.—On the following Tuesday.

Q.—Were you afraid of him? A.—Yes, he had threatened to blow my brains out.

Q.—Did you endeavor to break off your relations with him? A.—Yes, I had made up my mind that since he would not marry me I would have nothing more to do with him.

Q.—What did you do with the revolver? A.—I took it home and loaded it.

Q.—All of the chambers? A.—I think so.

Q.—What did you then do with it? A.—I put it under the pillow of my bed.

MORE TROOPS IN LONDONDERRY

Big Force Between Sinn Fein and Unionist Quarters to Check Warfare

London, May 18.—Heavy reinforcements of troops were on guard at Londonderry today to preserve order in that city, following the fatal outbreaks on Saturday and Sunday nights.

Eight cordons of soldiers were stationed between the Sinn Fein and Unionist headquarters. Advices from Londonderry said that the city was quiet.

The Sinn Fein organization in Dublin has appointed a commission of five to administer affairs in Roscommon county, according to a dispatch from the Irish capital. The clerks of the Dublin law courts are on strike and the buildings have been picketed.

The Irish labor troubles have extended to the Irish sweep raising industry. In the vicinity of Mitchelstown, twenty-five miles northeast of York, the shepherds quit work, allowing 5,000 sheep to run wild. Political and labor agitations are intermixed. The secretary of the Irish Labor Federation was quoted as saying that "the Irish republic will not be like the American republic, whose liberty is unknown."

'Stop Talking Panic, Go to Work,' Says Liggett

New York, May 18.—"If the American people will stop talking panic and go to work, they will forget about the panic that some of them imagine they see coming," according to Louis K. Liggett.

Mr. Liggett, head of the United Drug Company, who returned from Europe on the Baltic, said that Europe was rapidly recovering and was prosperous and that America was doing too much worrying.

"Europe has gone further on the way to recovery than the Americans realize," he said. "Belgium has recovered. France is coming forward rapidly. It is levying heavy taxes, but most of the money will go for rehabilitation of the devastated areas, and Germany will repay that ultimately.

"England is treating her business men liberally in the way of credits. The banking system there is getting along with a gold reserve about one-third of what we have in America.

"We are worrying too much over our gold reserve and foreign credits. Credits should be extended without reserve for the European customers who would accept them. They are good and will ultimately pay. Our policy of caution is costing us dearly in trade."

George J. Whelan, prominent tobacco merchant, was practicing of the same opinion as to conditions in Europe.

"Our allies in Europe are recovering rapidly, financially and industrially, and there is no justification for the panic talk in the United States," he said. "I traveled extensively through England, France and Italy and found the people cheerful and everywhere hard at work. The agricultural classes are especially optimistic.

"France expects to raise enough grain for home use this year. In England there is a shortage of sugar, but in all other places that I visited food is plentiful. Prices are not high except in the large cities, and in those places there is a great waste of food."

MISSION HILL MOURNS HERO

Joseph T. Egan, Driving Truck, Killed When He Swerved to Avoid Children

Mission Hill, Roxbury, today mourned the heroic death of one of its most lovable young citizens. For, Monday, Joseph T. Egan of No. 53 Longwood avenue had a momentous decision to make and decided grandly, in spite of great self-sacrifice.

Egan, who was driving a truck near his home, had swerved in his course to run over a child at the same time behind two youngsters madly dashed out, and Egan, turning his truck as far as he could to save the babies, crashed upon the sidewalk to his death.

Mrs. Catherine Egan, mother of the young hero, wished the wish that is old as love itself: "Would that it had been me instead," she mourned. "Why should my boy have been taken in his youth, and his mother left behind?"

"My son's death was just like his life," his mother said. "He always thought of what it was to think of himself when anyone else had to be considered. I am a widow, and for years he has been my support.

"Only fifteen minutes before he was killed I had said goodby to him. It was supper time and he had still one more to deliver in Brookline.

"He belonged to the St. Alphonsus Society for many years. He was leader in the Mission Church Fife and Drum Corps. He was instructor for St. John's boys when he died."

CARRANZA LAST SEEN MAY 16

Washington, May 18.—President Carranza was last seen in the village of Tlaxia, State of Puebla, on May 16, according to Mexican press reports forwarded to the State Department today from the American Embassy at Mexico City. Tlaxia is about ninety miles northeast of Mexico City and the entire State of Yucatan, which includes the important seaport of Progreso, is in the hands of the revolutionists, and General Tomas Garrido has been named provisional governor, according to official advices to the agency of the Mexican provisional government here today.

Castro Morales, Carranza governor and General Pablo de la Garza, commanding the federal troops in that State, have fled, presumably to Cuba, the report stated, and the military forces of 5,000 men have declared allegiance to the provisional government.

LIMIT RIGHTS OF LANDLORDS

Five Bills in Legislature Extend Privileges and Protect Rent Payers

The five rent bills reported by the Joint Committee on Judiciary of the Legislature went before the House of Representatives, today.

These bills were reported by the committee as the result of the vigorous campaign conducted by the Boston American through the Boston American Tenants' League, and are based upon the provisions of the bill originally drawn by Representative Martin Hays of Brighton.

One of the most important bills from the tenants' points of view is that which states that "unjust, unreasonable and oppressive" agreements for the payment of rent or the use and occupation of premises occupied for dwelling purposes, other than rooms in a hotel, lodging house or rooming house, shall be a defense to actions for rent or for use and occupation under such agreements.

LIMIT ADVANCES.

The bill provides that where the rent has been increased more than 25 per cent as it existed one year prior to the time of the agreement under which rent is sought to be recovered, except in cases where unusual repairs and alterations have been made, "such agreement shall be presumed to be unjust, unreasonable and oppressive."

The bill further provides that either landlord or tenant may apply to the courts for relief and prove that in particular instances either more or less than 25 per cent. is reasonable or unreasonable.

Next in importance to the average tenant is the bill which provides in actions of summary process to recover possession of dwelling premises, in which the tenant is not at fault, the courts may grant a stay of execution for six months. The tenant will pay such rent as the court may direct to the clerk of the court instead of to the landlord in such cases.

FOLLOW NEW YORK.

Both of these bills, which replaced sections of the Hays bill to the same end, are based upon the laws recently enacted in New York.

A third bill makes it a misdemeanor punishable by a fine, or six months' imprisonment, for any lessor of any building to fail to furnish such water, heat, light, power, elevator service, or telephone service as may be required by the terms of his agreement with the tenant.

Under the terms of a fourth bill a city or town in which an emergency exists may purchase or take by eminent domain any real property. This bill permits cities and towns to make individual building loans to its citizens, and for this purpose municipalities may borrow money.

The fifth bill simply extends the time for the entire law until February 1, 1922—which is the life of all the bills. The thirty-day law would be in force by February.

Each of the bills has an emergency preamble.

"BLUEBEARD" WATSON CONFESSES TO MURDER OF WIFE WITH AXE

This monster, now serving a life sentence in the California State Prison, has given the world a list of nine women he knows that he married. The testimony in which this confession is set forth in full, is appearing daily in the Boston American. The case is peculiar because the people know Watson, or Gillmore, as he now claims to be named, better as "Bluebeard." Full,

THEATRES

NEW "FOLLIES" DAZZLE AT COLONIAL

By FRED J. McISAAC.
Dramatic Editor.

Mr. Flo Ziegfeld's thirteenth annual Follies are now in our midst. This important entertainment usually comes in September, but the Actor's strike last Fall caused Boston to lose the booking. It is playing at the Colonial Theatre.

The "Follies" are the largest and most expensive aggregation of talent which ever leaves New York. The members of its chorus bear a nation-wide reputation for beauty, jewelry and pride. To mention all the principals by name would require more space than is needed to tell the details of a prominent murder.

The way I understand it, Mr. Ziegfeld gives the scenery and costume makers carte blanche as regards cost. He engages a dozen scenario writers, authors, humorists, artists and composers and gets from the aggregation about ten complete shows. These he boils down. After he is through the authors and composers referred to above pick up what is thrown out, and make a nice living turning out musical shows from the scraps refuse for a whole season.

After all the bills are in Mr. Ziegfeld finds out what his show costs, and assesses every community accordingly. The assessment this season is higher than ever before, but so are the skirts.

Urban designed the "Follies of 1919" just as he has done the last half dozen. While losing nothing of his genius as color combinations, Urban has gotten away from his besetting sin of ponderousness. After all the early Urban scenery was put upon the stage there was no room for actors. Now the entire "Follies" troupe can be displayed at once.

He is running this year to very gorgeous curtains. There are a dozen drops that are absolutely exquisite.

You can never tell what Ziegfeld will spring on you, and this time it is a tenor who can sing. John Steel, who puts over "Tulip Time," and a group of semi-classics possesses a really beautiful lyric tenor. This season we have Marilynn Miller, who can't sing, but who can dance divinely; both Eddie Cantor and Bert Williams, whose specialties need no introduction; Leon Errol, the inconfidential songbirds; the Fairbanks Twins, the Dooleys, Johnnie and Ray; Phil Dwyer and a host of pretty girls.

Several dazzling living pictures designed by Ben Ali Haggin including the justly celebrated "Lady Godiva," taking her equally celebrated ride, "arrayed in her beauty and nothing else beside," give the audience something to gasp about. Among the composers listed are Victor Herbert, who wrote the ballet and "Irving Berlin, Raymond Wolf, Dave Stamper, Victor Jacobi and Gene Buck are among those mentioned.

The "Follies" are an eyeful, and an earful. They have no rivals.

Coming Events

MAJESTIC THEATRE—Through a quick change of booking, A. H. Woods is sending "The Ouija Board" to the Majestic Theatre for a brief visit, beginning next Monday. This is the play of spiritism which has caused something of a sensation in New York all season.

PLYMOUTH THEATRE—"A Question of Time" is the title of the play which will begin an engagement at the Plymouth Theatre next Monday night. This is another A. H. Woods production and was written by Emily Ann Wellman.

WILBUR THEATRE—At the Wilbur Theatre beginning Friday night of next week, May 28, the attraction will be Lew Field's production of "A Poor Little Rich Girl." The theatre will be closed from Monday until Thursday night, inclusive, for rehearsals of this new offer.

SAILORS' JAZZ BAND BACK AT KEITH'S

The Boston Navy Yard Jazz Band which in 1918 started on a most eventful and extensive tour from the Charlestown Navy Yard along lines organized by Chief Yeoman (F) Miss Marie A. George, welfare aide, is back at Keith's this week with a long list of laurels and a greatly augmented repertory. In two years time the band has become an organization of permanent importance. A rousing welcome was given the bandsmen by the Keith's audience.

Miss Helen Keller, who, unfortunately, suffered a relapse yesterday from an attack of rheumatism, which followed influenza, was unable to appear.

The navy boys filled the gap caused by Miss Keller's absence and did admirably, greatly enhancing the otherwise sprightly and sparkling program.

Frank Wilcox and company, just over from New York, appear in "Sah-h," unreservedly one of the best sketches seen in vaudeville in a considerable time. Mr. Wilcox and his company have an excellent playlet and know how to act it. It is a splendid tabloid comedy, capitally done, and was punctuated with peels of laughter and merriment.

Bailey and Cowan, well known song writers, are seen in a striking novelty with Miss Estelle Davis. Hallen and Hunter and Daley Neilis add mightily to the bill. Harry Mayo is an unusually clever comedian and Johnny Hall and company present a top-notch act. Gallagher and Martin are also on the minstrel daylight saving time. And there is "Samoya," a Spanish European wonder. There are the usual kinograms and topics.

COHAN PLAY SCORES HIT AT HOLLIS

By FRED J. McISAAC,
Dramatic Editor.

"Genius and the Crowd," a new comedy by John T. McIntyre and Francis Hill, introduced Boston to a new star, at the Hollis last night, in the person of Grace Henderson.

Mr. Renaverd, whose clever work with Mrs. Fiske in "Mis' Nellie of Nebraska" was commented over, high to stardom because George M. Cohan had a wonderful part for him in this play.

It is a wonderful part. The role of the temperamental young violinist is different to the rather colorless personality of Renaverd, and he gives a performance which is picturesque as well as consistent from beginning to end. Renavent, himself, is likely to be a big success in the role. The violinist is supposed to be in "Genius and the Crowd," and, by watching women in the audience from time to time with their eyes, you could understand the behavior of the ladies on the stage.

The story of "Genius and the Crowd" deals with a temperamental and spoiled musical genius who finds the adulation of the women who follow concerts and recitals a bit too much for wives to abandon his career rather than continue the public mania.

When his impresario is in despair, and while a concert audience is waiting, an astute automobile salesman reveals to the genius that he is really in love with his secretary and by a clever trick persuades him to keep his concert engagement and save his career.

The comedy is beautifully cast. The list of characters is very long, but no "bit" is too small to be slightly overdone. Each player done everything possible to make the piece a success.

It's merely a question whether the theatre-going public is as much interested in the idiosyncrasies of geniuses as those who follow music.

Personally I found the long second act in the violin shop, with its array of artistic and artless tools interesting, and the introduction of the once great tenor, now reduced to singing in a cheap cafe, a pathetic episode. Whether the other folks will like it as much, the box office will soon tell the producer.

A long line of female types who admired the violinist visited the shop, laughter as they were introduced in the first act, and the female mob scene was most ingeniously managed.

Aside from some snappy lines allotted to Frank Gerry, who did a most satisfactory job as the auto salesman, the dialogue is not in the least brilliant and it takes all the talent of Renevant from dismissing the violinist as a plain chump along about the middle of the second act.

Marion Coakley was winsome and convincing as the violinist's secretary. H. Cooper Cliffe did well with a particularly idiotic impresario. Fuller Mellish played an Italian violin maker with a stipe English accent. Ralph Sonie sang "Celeste Aida" in the wings very acceptably.

PARK THEATRE—Fifty years ago our fathers, and years before that, their own fathers, thrilled with astonishment no doubt over the stories of James Fenimore Cooper. Today we find that same sort of stimulant in the motion pictures of William S. Hart, as presented by Paramount Artcraft, a splendid example of which is "The Toll Gate," which was shown at the Park Theatre last night to a lusty and enthusiastic audience. The border line of the Southwest is the scene of the story that is unfolded.

MODERN and BEACON — Ethel Clayton makes of the girl heroine of "A Lady in Love a wholly appealing person, and the picture has attractive qualities that pleased audiences at the Modern and Beacon Theatres yesterday immensely. Her pictures have a human note rare in the screen. Miss Clayton enacts her role with the charm and understanding that made "The Thirteenth Commandment" and "Young Mrs. Winthrop" delights.

GAIETY THEATRE—Harry Hastings' big show began a week's engagement at the Gayety. Comic interludes and witty sayings mark this big burlesque bit. Dan Coleman, long popular in vaudeville, appears in the two burlesques. William Wainwright, Gitte Le Compte, Marjorie Mandeville and Alma Bauer are conspicuous in the cast. The chorus of twenty-four is comely, and spirited.

UPHAM'S CORNER STRAND—"Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," featuring John Barrymore in the role, of the unfortunate physician, makes of the film version a thoroughly worthwhile and, in many ways, fascinating photoplay. It is at the Upham's Corner Strand.

MALDEN AUDITORIUM—"The Rose of Eve," which was presented by the Temple Stock Co. at the Malden Auditorium yesterday, is not a Biblical play, in fact it is a very snappy, breezy comedy that savors very much of the present day.

Plays That Remain

TREMONT THEATRE—"Mary," the George M. Cohan operetta at the Tremont, began its second big week last night.

MAJESTIC THEATRE—John Golden announces that this is the final week of his charming idyll of the Blue Ridge Range "Howdy, Folks!" at the Majestic Theatre.

PLYMOUTH THEATRE—By an arrangement just completed between the Messrs. Shubert and Robert Milton, producer of the dainty comedy, "The Charm School," which has been playing at the Plymouth Theatre, the play will be transferred from the Plymouth Theatre, Boston, to the Plymouth Theatre, New York. This is its last week here.

WILBUR THEATRE—"Oui Madame" will close its engagement at the Wilbur Theatre Saturday night of this week.

PARK SQUARE THEATRE—"Listen Lester" has moved to the Park Square Theatre after a successful run at the Colonial lasting several weeks. It is the same production, without change in the cast. The highly amusing musical comedy drew a full house last night and Fred Heigler's hilarious comedy kept the audience in a state of wonderful dancing of Ada May Weeks is worthy of comment.

"RIVER'S END" A THRILLING FILM DRAMA

"The River's End," which began a run at Tremont Temple yesterday, is a smashing new story of God's country of the snow wastes of the frozen North, of the edge of civilization where there are no traditions and men must live life with all the strength of soul within them—virile men who may be good or bad, but whatever they are, they are strong.

John Keith, wanted for murder, is captured after a two-year chase by Constable of the Royal Mounted Police. While bringing his prisoner back, Conniston dies.

Conniston and Keith bear a striking resemblance so Keith impersonates Conniston and returns to the north to claim the wife of the murdered man.

Shan Tung, a Chinaman, recognizes Keith but keeps his identity secret. Shan Tung is in love with a white girl and holds a strange influence over her.

Conniston's sister arrives on the scene after two years search for her brother. She believes Keith to be the slayer of her brother.

He falls in love with her. After a battle in the opium den in which Keith kills the Chinaman and frees the white girl from his spell, he tells Conniston's sister all. Then he flees back to the snow wastes. But she learns of the whole past mystery, and what she does is something you will wish to learn.

The roles of both John Keith and Derwent Conniston are portrayed by Legis Stone, who reaches heights seldom attained in dual-role depiction. He is supported by such popular stars as Marjorie Daw, J. Barney Sherry, Jane Novak, Charles West and Togo Yamamoto.

ORPHEUM THEATRE—Patrons of Loew's Orpheum Theatre enjoyed a real treat yesterday and the bill was received with much enthusiasm. L. Wolfe Hilbert, whose compositions have been sung all over the land and won fame for him, appeared personally, supported by Harold Donnelly and Fritzi Leyton. Stan and May Laurel offered a farce comedy styled, "No Matter to Guide Him" which provided a good long laugh. George Walsh was also seen in the latest William Fox production, "The Deadline."

GLOBE THEATRE—The program for the first half of this week at Mayor's Globe Theatre is headed by the brilliant William Fox star, George Walsh, in "The Deadline."

NEWMAN SQUARE THEATRE—Patrons of the Codman Square Theatre, Dorchester, were delighted with the program offered yesterday, which was comprised of the very best in vaudeville and photoplays. Four acts of vaudeville were followed by the first Dorchester showing of Shirley Mason in "Molly and I."

SOMERVILLE THEATRE — The second musical attraction of the season at the popular Somerville Theatre has scored a great hit and two crowded houses yesterday viewed the first stock presentation of "Oh Lady, Lady!" which also scored a big hit during its recent Boston run.

CAMBRIDGE CENTRAL SQUARE—Justifying the claims made for her by the motion picture critics of the country, Alice Lake, Metro's newest star, made her appearance yesterday at Gordon's Cambridge Central Square Theatre in Jane A. Hervey's immortal drama of "Shore Acres."

WALDRON'S CASINO—Ted Burns dominates one of the big scenes in the "Oh! Girl!" production, which all this week will entertain the patrons of Waldron's Casino. A hilarious two-act burlesque is offered which is entitled "Passing the Buck." It has been called "a merry-go-round the East, in ten laughing laps."

Yiddish Plays

Morris Schwartz, the celebrated Yiddish star, and his company come direct from the Irving Place Theatre, New York, and will begin a two-week engagements at the Boston Opera House next Sunday evening with a realistic play entitled, "Tovye der Milchiger" or "Tobias the Milkman."

Norumbega Park

Norumbega Park, the noted Summer amusement place of Greater Boston, will open its twenty-fourth season Saturday, May 22, under the management of Carl Alberte. Feature motion pictures each evening in the big open air theatre will be one of the many pleasing innovations this season.

MUSICAL SHOW PLEASES AT SHUBERT

"Til Say She Does," a comedy around an old theme, trimmed up somewhat and with music and dances to match, opened last night at the Shubert. Its initial performance was given under more or less auspicious circumstances. Governor Coolidge and other State officials occupied boxes on one side of the house while Mayor Peters, General Edwards and officers attached to the Department of the Northeast were in boxes on the other side.

The net proceeds of the first week are to be turned over to the American Legion, to aid in this week's drive for membership. Last night was army night and several hundred members of this branch of the service, members of the American Legion, Spanish War veterans and other patriotic organizations were guests of the management.

"Til Say She Does" was written by Avery Hopwood. The lyrics and music are by R. G. DeSylva. The piece is irresistibly tuneful, while the basic plot calls for more snappy dialogue than has been heard in most of the recent musical shows.

The play centres around "Dodo" Weldon, the frivolous and flirtatious wife of Herb Weldon, who finds that married life with but one husband is too tame an affair and so she surrounds herself by a few "tame pussies."

Herb never comes home without finding one of these pets entertaining wife and so he decides to find out "where he's at." He enters "Bobo" Brown, an old college chum, a harmless kind of woman-shy individual, just back from China, to do the finding.

"Bobo" is forced to play the part of the blase man about town, invites wifie for a midnight supper at his bachelor apartment and then report to friend hubby just how serious the lady's flirtatiousness really is.

Bobo finds himself with more company than he bargained for. But like all musical shows the complications are finally straightened out and with contented chat she was "only doing it for fun."

Juliette Day is ideally adapted to portray the free-and-easy character of Dodo. She has a good voice which she uses to perfection in the play's most effective solo "Just Let Me Sleep."

Roland Young played the bashful, timid Bobo, and Ernest Glendenning is the abused husband.

A comedy, attractively costumed chorus of excellent dancers give a suitable background to the production, which, from all indications last night, is due for a most successful run.

GORDON'S OLYMPIAS—In "Miss Lady Valentine," Metro's screen version of the famous Paul Armstrong crook play, Bert Lytell has a role utterly different from other his characters in "Lombardi, Ltd." or in "The Right of Way" and he enacts the popular part of Jimmy with such extraordinary cleverness that he never stops to think that it is acting at all. Probably many who saw the picture last evening at Gordon's Olympia and Bowdoin Square Olympia have seen the play done on the stage. No doubt many of the throng that is sure to crowd these Gordon picture playhouses throughout the run of "Miss Jimmy Valentine" are in a measure familiar with the story.

AIMS TO SAVE 3,000 CHILDREN

Miss Edna Lawrence Spencer, speaking at Faneuil Hall in opposition to the maternity bill submitted to the Legislature by Representative B. Loring Young, declared that the maternity benefits bill offered by herself would save the lives of 3,000 children in this State annually.

Needy expectant mothers will be especially cared for under the provisions of Miss Spencer's bill, said its author.

Mrs. Walter A. Buckley pointed out the importance of caring for mothers, prenatal and post-natal attention. The welfare of the child, she said, means the welfare of the nation. She introduced a presiding officer, former Senator Charles L. Gifford, who was chairman of the Ways and Means committee which favorably reported the Spencer bill last year.

After expounding the virtues of the Spencer bill, Mr. Gifford referred to the millions of dollars the State has been spending for the blind and cripples. He said the enactment of Miss Spencer's bill would greatly decrease the birth of defective babies.

WANT STRAIGHT 1 P. C. SALES TAX

New York, May 18.—A straight tax of 1 per cent. on all sales was recommended by the Committee on Taxation of the National Association of Manufacturers which began its Twenty-fifth annual convention here. The committee presented a comprehensive scheme of taxation as a substitute for the present scheme in which the excess profits tax is particularly objectionable.

In addition to the tax on gross sales, the committee recommended a normal tax of 4 per cent. on all incomes over $2,500 for single persons and $5,000 for married people.

The committee pointed out as an illustration of the merits of the proposed tax on sales that a 1 per cent. tax on beef from the hoof to the consumer would bring revenue of $80,000,000 a year and increase the cost of the meat to the consumer only one-half a cent a pound.

MOTHER AND INFANT SON DRAGGED 50 FEET BY CAR

Mrs. Agnes Leavitt, No. 324 Washington street, Lynn, and her eighteen-months-old infant son, were dragged fifty feet on Lynn Shore Drive when struck by an automobile driven by Andrew F. Cooney, No. 311 Webster street, Haverhill. The baby was snatched from in front of a fruit ton truck by Miss Mildred Avery, No. 67 Tutor street. Mrs. Leavitt suffered numerous bruises and possible internal injuries, while the baby suffered two broken fingers.

What Every Autoist Should Know

On June 26 a new law relative to the right of way at the intersection of streets goes into effect in this State and motorists should familiarize themselves with it. If two automobiles arrive at two intersecting roads at about the same time and no traffic officer is there the machine on the right shall have the right of way. The car on the left must stop. If it does not and there is an accident the driver of that car is legally responsible, Representative John A. Whitebrookfield is the author of the new law.

The following explains the new law, the accompanying diagram as an illustration:

A must stop to permit B to pass, as B is on the right of A. If A, B and C reach the intersection shown in sketch at the same time A must stop to permit B and C to pass, B and C having as the right hand side of vehicles.

A, B, C and D meet as shown in the sketch motorists will have a puzzle to solve, according to State Registrar of Motor Vehicles Jack A. Goodwin. In such an event each driver would have another on his left and so would have the right of way. On the other hand, Goodwin says, "common sense ought to prevail at such a time, but as the law reads it looks as if the drivers will have something to argue about if in case meet in collision under such circumstances. Mr. Goodwin expects that will never occur.

SIMS 'REPEATS' PENROSE STORY

Daniels Says Admiral's Charges Are Just Like Those of 'Boss' in 1918

Washington, May 18.—Charges made against the Navy Department by Admiral Sims are the "amplified and repeated" statements of Senator Boies Penrose of Pennsylvania, made in the Senate August 24, 1918, Secretary Josephus Daniels today told the Senate sub-committee investigating the charges.

"I have been informed that it was not Admiral Sims who originated this charge, but that it was first made in the Senate by Senator Penrose," Daniels said, "it attracted no attention whatever then. It would have been as easily answered then as now, however."

Daniels quoted from the speech made by Penrose in the Senate during discussion of the activity on the Atlantic coast of German sea raiders. Penrose charged that the Secretary of the Navy lost three months, and very likely much more time, before he got started on his naval preparedness," and that the loss to the United States in dollars alone would be $15,000,000 or more.

"Either Admiral Sims is a plagiarist and appropriated his views and charges from Senator Penrose, or by the same science of mental telepathy the views of the Senator from Pennsylvania were communicated to Admiral Sims by wave lengths or some other wireless method unknown to those not familiar to occult science," Daniels continued.

"Penrose comes from Pennsylvania and Sims was appointed to the Naval Academy from that State. Did they collaborate or exchange mental telegrams?" Daniels asked.

"They all speak the Senator's language, phrase and all. You might have saved thousands of reams of paper by investigating his brief accusations which his plagiarists by hypnotized sureties have elaborated into many hundred thousand words," Daniels continued.

will help to jump the prices of gasoline from thirty-four cents to fifty, and from there to a dollar.

The excuses of the monopolists will be, "The oil is almost gone, that's why." But suppose water that supplies a city were almost exhausted, and would be entirely exhausted in fifty years. Would that be a good excuse for charging citizens ten dollars a gallon for water. Are millions going to realize the dangers of the future as well as the necessities of the present?

For a first class picture of incompetence study the government of this country, arresting and locking up men that charge too much for a linen collar or rain coat. And allowing oil monopolists to tax the people hundreds of millions a year without even finding out what gasoline, kerosene and other oil products ought to cost. Some pocketbooks seem to be so fat all the government can't reach them.

URGE REPORT ON MASON BILL

Boston Irish Societies Telegraph Congressmen; Friends Uphold Tague Resolve

Branches of the Friends of Irish Freedom in Greater Boston as well as other Irish organizations, are flooding the Congressional Committee on Foreign Relations at Washington, D. C., with telegrams calling for an early and favorable report on the so-called Mason bill, which, if accepted by the Congress of the United States, will recognize Ireland as a free and independent nation.

The National Bureau of Information of the Friends of Irish Freedom in Washington, D. C., today issued the following statement:

UPHOLDS REP. TAGUE.

"The efforts being made in some quarters to have it appear the resolution introduced in the House of Representatives by Congressman Tague of Massachusetts is not officially sponsored by Ireland's friends in America should not be heeded. The Tague resolution asks for arraignment of those Irish patriots arrested by the English authorities. Arraignment in a legal sense means decreeing liberty or holding for trial. Congressman Tague has moved in the right direction.

"Intelligent leadership always spells success. No progress can be made in behalf of Ireland by unfair, and undeserved criticism of members of Congress who, themselves of Irish blood, willingly, devotedly and with fine patriotism, are striving to accomplish beneficial results. Congressman Tague's efforts and not the efforts of a few well-meaning friends of Ireland should be encouraged cordially."

Protest meetings by Irish societies will be held shortly to condemn the contemplated efforts of the British government to have the United States agree to a "pooling of war debts." In a communication to those organizations by the national leaders of the Friends of Irish Freedom mention is made that "the object of this move is to force the United States to assume at least one-fifth, if not more, of all the expenses incurred by the Allies before this country entered the war.

WOULD INCREASE U. S. DEBT.

"This would, of course, result in cancellation of a very considerable part of Britain's present financial indebtedness to us and would force the assumption by the United States of a largely increased debt. Every American citizen, particularly every person who pays a tax of any kind, must realize the lurking danger behind the British scheme to have the war debts pooled."

Michael Davitt Branch of the Friends of Irish Freedom will hold a public protest meeting in Paine Memorial Hall, Appleton street, Sunday night. A resolution will be adopted condemning the "pooling of war debts" and noted speakers will voice their sentiment on the subject.

FIELD ESTATE PAYING $3,000,000 INCOME TAX

Chicago, May 18.— Answering charges that the estate of Marshall Field, former merchant prince, is piling up millions so rapidly it is becoming a public menace, John S. Wilson, attorney for the trustees, stated that 75 per cent. of the gross income of the estate goes to the government in the form of income taxes.

Wilson is fighting the efforts of Captain Marshall Field, 3rd, to break his grandfather's will. The net income of the estate in 1917, before the present income law went into effect, was $4,425,512, Wilson said. The following year, under the law, it dropped to $2,562,709. Last year the estate paid $3,000,000 income tax.

WALSH URGES ACTION ON H. C. L.

Urges Government Stores to Meet Situation

United States Senate, that the widespread discontent in this country is due to an increasing belief that our government has failed to make any appreciable progress in dealing with the grievous evils that have crept into the body politic.

"We have talked very much of late about Americanism and the adoption of legislation providing for the education of our foreign population according to American ideals.

People Losing Faith in the Government, Says Walsh

"The time has come when the government must show the people that it has the power and inclination to right their wrongs. I repeat, the most dangerous condition in America is the feeling that the government has broken down."—Extract from speech of Senator Walsh in the Senate today.

"Only superficial observers believe that the radical element exists only among the non-assimilated foreign population. We believe this so, we might feel no special alarm. Our daily experiences show clearly that the American people, native and foreign alike, are seething with discontent and dissatisfaction with the existing social order.

"He who has eyes sees that the great middle class, the salaried employes in and out of government service, the preachers and the teachers, are espousing the cause of radical ideas to a greater extent than ever before.

"The time has come when the government must show the people that it has the power and inclination to right their wrongs. I repeat, the most dangerous condition in America is the feeling that the government has broken down.

"What is the doctrine that the radicals are preaching to our people? They point out astonishing profiteering on the part of those who provide the necessaries of life. They assert that nothing definite has been done by the government to stop it. They argue that our public officials are 'controlled.' They argue as the remedy industrial reorganization, instead of political reorganization.

"The number of followers of these people increases. Their organizations multiply.

"There is an answer to this outcry. Our splendid form of government has been so organized that under it every wrong can ultimately be righted. I protest, therefore, against the belief that the only salvation of the people lies in the overthrow of the present order.

WORSE THAN DURING WAR.

"But is there any sound basis for these complaints? Let us see what rise in price levels and the cost of living during the war reveals.

"The beginning of the tremendous upward trend in the costs of living was the natural consequence of the government's policy of throwing open our markets to the demands of belligerent countries. Coming so suddenly, this tremendous drainage of our markets caused a rapid increase in prices, which have since gone steadily upward, never backward. The people of our country into the war intensified this unhealthy condition. To point out that the government, through its own choice of possible policies, is primarily responsible for the rise in living costs.

"But since the war ended conditions have grown worse. It seems as if a band of robbers infested the land. Combines and trusts, by each if not by actual agreement, hold up their products for constantly increasing gain, and ruthlessly exploit the buyers.

"The profiteering corporations have resorted to many successful devices to conceal from the public their true net earnings and the actual investment on which the profit should justly be computed. The payment of excessive salaries is one favorite way of concealing real profits.

"Another favorite method of camouflage is to set aside greatly excessive depreciation funds, the greater part of which, not being needed for their ostensible purpose, go later to swell the corporation's surplus and justify unreasonable stock dividends.

"And most common and important of all is the issue of watered stocks, representing at the outset nothing but the right to share in the unjust exactions of a monopolized industry, and later on representing the capitalization of excess profits that never should have been allowed to be made.

"Turning from the general to the particular, we find examples of conscienceless profiteering in food products.

SKYROCKETING OF SUGAR.

"According to the Federal Trade Commission the Armour Grain Company, a large factor in the cereal and breakfast food business, reported in 1917 net earnings of 290.7 per cent. on the capital stock, or 67.7 per cent. on the net worth of the company, including capital, surplus and undivided profits.

"The 'Big Five' meat packers, who within the memory of a score of middle age, while enriching their controlling owners beyond the dreams of nineteenth century avarice, have swelled their invested capital to the half billion mark as a result of the capitalization of excess profits, made, according to the Federal Trade Commission, a total profit of $905,659,000 in 1917, as compared with a total profit of $322,000,000 in 1914.

"Is there any plausible explanation why the price of sugar has jumped to six times its normal price, long after the war is over and without any proportionate shortage in the world's supply. A large brokerage concern recently stated that there are some thirty new parties to the 100 per cent. and over on their stock, and that even the six present dividends are no criterion of actual profits, since stockholders are sure to receive large cash or stock dividends in the near future.

"A conspicuous factor in bringing about the present unwarranted high prices of clothing is the American Woolen Company. This combination, which has for more than seven years controlled the market for all fabrics of which wool, new or reworked, forms a part, has derived its plant and all other assets almost entirely from the excessive profits of excess profits.

"But the American Woolen Company, at the chief, is not the only clothing profiteer. The cotton mills have also entered and are still exacting extraordinary profits."

Senator Walsh scored the coal miners, the newsprint profiteers and others.

SCORES REPUBLICANS.

"There are many writers and speakers, Mr. President, who are attempting to divert public attention from the manufacturing and commercial profiteers and place the responsibility for the high costs of living upon the inflation of the currency and the credit, upon restricted output and

"While the outcry of profiteering is being greeted from pulpit and soap box, prices continue to rise unhindered by the inactivity of Congress presents a spectacle of indifference seldom surpassed since the courtiers of Louis the Fourteenth reveled while the French peasants ate grass.

"Mr. President, Congress has been culpably inactive. I am not given to partisan charges, but it is self-evident where the burden of the responsibility rests. The Republican majority in this chamber and in the lower branch have had the power and it was their duty, to devise and enact effectual remedies. It is in vain for the Republican steering committees to try to shift the blame to the President or his attorney-general."

Coming to the remedy, the Massachusetts Senator concluded as follows:

PUBLICITY AS WEAPON.

"My first suggestion is that a thorough examination of the income tax returns be undertaken by a committee of this Senate, so that the real extent of profiteering may be disclosed and the chief offenders pointed out. Such an inquiry, even if it accomplish nothing more, will give indisputable proof that our government does not intend to keep a veil of secrecy over any facts pertaining to profiteering.

"I also recommend immediate action by this body on the long-pending anti-profiteering measures to which I have referred in the early part of my address and which are still pending before Congress.

"I further recommend that Congress give proof to the country that it stands ready, that it is willing, and that it is determined promptly to inaugurate public trading on a large scale unless exorbitant profits are voluntarily and materially reduced at once. In a word, I recommend government competition as an available remedy.

GOVERNMENT COMPETITION.

"Big business must not think that the elimination of competition makes the public powerless to stop profiteering. If simple business public sentiment stands against interfering with the lawful dealer's right to do business.

"It must be remembered there still remains the right of the people to set up government competition, and I believe that if the government would only demonstrate that it did in the armor plate case—that it is willing to deal in public necessaries whenever the profits of concerns handling them become extortionate, that we would soon discover a willingness on their part to be satisfied with fair profits.

"The war has ushered in a new way of thinking about the relation between those who toil and those who gain, and we are seeking a way to smooth out the difficulties of the parties at conflict. But so long as gain shall be permitted by this government to loiter upon excessive large returns at the expense of the greater number, there never can be any stability in theory or substance to our social and industrial order. It is for us to superimpose, methods of altruism upon the injurious machinations of self-interest, and if we are unable to do so by mere regulative measures, then in the name of fair play we must take the matter in our own hands and substitute government for private distribution of the necessary commodities of our people.

"In conclusion, I again ask, How can this Congress expect the approval of the record made by it since March 4, 1919, in solving or attempting to solve the problem of profiteering which is such an important factor in the high cost of living? Why has there been no successful attempt made to check the profiteer? To be sure, much of the statesmanship in Congress has been absorbed in the admittedly important task of adjusting our international problems. It is a pity, however, that the Republican Congress has not formulated a policy of reconstruction at home. We surely cannot point with pride to the fact that of all the nations of the world America is the only country which up to the present time has adopted no policy of reconstruction since the cessation of hostilities in November, 1918.

"It is not yet too late. We still have an opportunity in the few remaining months of the session to do some effective Americanization work, and I do not hesitate to say that the most necessary Americanization work needed today is the Americanization of the greedy and selfish profiteers."

"A Mass of Sores —No Sleep— Unhappy Days"

So writes F. D. Smith, 4815 Shelby Street, Shawnee, Okla. He says:

"I suffered terrible itching; body covered with awful sores which caused me great pain. When itching got so I could not stand it, I finally tried D. D. Prescription. This medicine has made a well man of me."

Thousands of grateful users of D. D. D. are just as enthusiastic over its wonderful results in Mr. Smith. The very first application allays the itching and burning. Just try a bottle of D. D. D. and convince yourself. Your money back if the first bottle does not bring relief. Sec. size and $1.00. Try D. D. D. Soap, too.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfil the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A meritive value almost sells itself, as like an ideal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited, to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfils almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments, corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by Parcel Post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention the Boston American. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Advertisement.

'BLUEBEARD' DESCRIBES DEATH OF HIS FIRST VICTIM

This is the second chapter of the confession of J. P. Watson, alias Harvey and Harris, who has admitted killing nine of his twenty-five wives. The confession is in the form of answers to questions of District-Attorney Woolwine of Los Angeles.

CHAPTER II.

Q—Can you recall the year when you changed your name to Harris? A.—All I can do is just try to recall the year, and I think it is thirteen or fourteen years ago.

Q.—Why did you change your name? A.—Well, I wanted her to think I was dead.

Q.—How you get any money from Mrs. Wallingsworth? A.—I don't know where I would get it because she never had five cents.

Q.—You thought you were badly treated? A.—In other words, just conniving through all I had making me lose what I did have, and I said at last, 'Here you can have it and I will go.'

Q.—Now, be perfectly frank with me. Did any criminal feature enter into changing your name at that time? A.—In no sense or nature of any kind, or indictment, or anything of any kind.

THE MARRIED AGAIN.

Q.—I am sure that you didn't make away with this woman? A.—Absolutely. She was married again.

Q.—Are you quite sure that the only reason you had for changing your name is that this woman mistreated you? A.—As I say, she practically made me fall. There was nothing criminal about it.

Q.—I am asking you was there any reason that actuated you in doing this outside of your desire to leave her and have her believe you dead? A.— That was the principal thing. And of course, I will say this: I felt an embarrassment on account of the financial position and there were some little obligations.

Q.—Where did you run from, Fort Smith? A.—I went to St. Louis.

Q.—How long did you stay? A.—Several years.

Q.—What did you do? A.—I went to work and I traveled for a stamp and seal house for a while. I started out and for quite a little while things prospered with me. Of course, knowing of this other affair, I married again.

THE SECOND WIFE.

Q.—Was that after you had a divorce? A.—It was after this woman got a divorce.

Q.—Now, you told me that we separated and she went to Denver.

Q.—Did you have a child by her? A.—No.

Q.—Do you know why she got a divorce? A.—We just simply couldn't get along.

Q.—Were you ever confronted with any charge to do her an injury. A.—Not the slightest.

Q.—What was her name? A.—Olive Gertrude Sit. She went to Denver and was divorced there.

Q.—Do you know if she is living now? A.—So far as I know she is.

Q.—Why does that affect you so to mention her name? A.—After she was divorced I met another girl and got married; as fine a little girl as ever lived.

Q.—In St. Louis? A.—Oh, yes.

Q.—Are you sure you are telling the truth when you say that? A.—Oh, yes, the papers were served on me.

Q.—Who was the second girl you married in St. Louis? A.—Her name was Alice Dee Austin.

COULDN'T PAY DEBTS.

Q.—You married her under the name of Lawrence Harris? A.—Yes, and things went along, and here is something—the fact is I skipped to keep from being prosecuted. There are peculiar things come up which nobody on earth could have control over. That is this: I handled these things and did quite a business. I advertised and I built quite a business.

It is just like, for instance, you are running a grocery store and you take in from everybody, and the bills come in, you send out your check, and the bills are paid, and the bills come in, you send out your check, and you keep going. And so with me. I settle. I have often said nobody realizes how few merchants were honest.

The first thing I know this fellow owed me $3 commission, that fellow $15 and that fellow $50.

I was advertising seven half a dozen States and things just went to pieces for a while, and what happened? These numerous people I would send checks to would make payments. Here is a peculiar part under the Federal laws: If somebody had remitted me and I couldn't settle with them he would have me arrested for using the mails to defraud while the other fellow that owed me as honestly as this other man, but I could not have him arrested; I could sue him.

The final outcome was like a thunderbolt. I was indicted. There was due me as much as I owed. And I simply went to Canada. Now, that is the truth.

Q.—Did you take your wife with you? A.—No.

Q.—How long had you been married to her when you left? A.—About two years.

Q.—You never saw her again? A.—No, but I kept up with the papers just to keep track and then later on I sent a divorce action and I didn't marry until I saw that.

Q.—Where did you go before going to Canada? A.—I went to Mexico. Then I went to St. Paul and to Moose Jaw.

Q.—When did you change your name? A.—Right there.

Q.—What was it? A.—Watson, James P.

STARTED NEW BUSINESS.

Q.—There has been some inquiry as to whether you married a woman in Saskatchewan by the name of Lillian Reed? A.—I never met her. I don't know anybody by the name of Lillian.

Q.—Here he tells of working for the Robb-Hood Mills in Calgary and Moose Jaw and then starting a business of his own.

Q.—How did you call your mercantile company in Vancouver? A.—It was under my name of Watson.

Q.—Was it P. Watson? A.—Most of it.

Q.—What did your letterhead read? A.—Canadian Protective Association.

Q.—Did you marry in Canada? A.—Yes, Mrs. Catherine Watson.

Q.—Is that the first person you did away with? A.—No sir.

Q.—Who was the man that kept your office? A.—It was a girl.

Q.—Who was the girl? A.—Mrs. Watson was there a part of the time.

Q.—That is the Catherine Watson?

A.—Yes, and we had one or two girls helping.

Q.—What is the name of the girl you kept there? Miss Bertha Johson.

Q.—When did you finally leave Canada? A.—I was in Canada several times last Summer.

Q.—Where did you call your home when you were arrested? A.—Edmonton was still the headquarters of our business.

Q.—Did you have somebody there representing you? A.—Mail was sent to Mrs. Watson and she attended to it.

Q.—What was her maiden name? A.—Kruse.

Q.—Where is she now? A.—Salem, Oregon.

Q.—Where have you been, so far as the United States is concerned within the last year? A.—Washington, Oregon and Vancouver. I came to California first in February or March, 1919.

Q.—On business? A.—I went up to see Katherine Watson at Salem a few days before Christmas.

Q.—Now, did you ever have any of these desires to slay in reference to Katherine Kruse Watson? A.—Well, I will tell you. There are times—if you will pardon me—well, the truth of the matter is, nearly all of these things were done—practically all of them—in a few months.

During that time, to be frank with you, it seems to me like I felt these pulsations, you know, I must get away; and that after these things were practically all committed, all in a few months, I seemed to realize, so far as these women are concerned —I fought it and fought it, and there was a period between the last one practically as long as all the others. It seems as if I was forgetting it, in getting away from it.

Q.—Hence all this now served to refresh your mind as to the dead women you did away with that you have not been able to tell the names of? A.—The name of one of them flashed into my mind. Her name was Austin.

Q.—Now, do you know her given name? A.—It was Marie.

Q.—Marie Austin? Is that right? A.—Now, this is funny—I think it is funny. Don't think I am telling you a untruth—when I tell you these things, but I believe it is Marie.

Q.—This is what I am after—I believe it is Marie M. Austin. She didn't have anything on earth, and even, honestly, was an Harvard graduate?

Q.—Where did you marry her? A.—In Calgary.

Q.—Now, which is the Mary Austin? A.—The one at Coeur D'Alene, Idaho. That is the one I married and in Lake Coeur d'Alene? A.—Yes.

Q.—I don't recall whether you told me whether you could swim before you put her in the lake. A.—You remember I told you something just simply putting the thing over, and it seems to me now I hit her once and put her down.

Another chapter in this remarkable confession will be printed in a subsequent edition of the American.

Theft of 170,000 Feet of Gas Charged

Harry Loschie, who is charged with operating a still on Joy street, was rearraigned again today on the additional charge of stealing 170,000 feet of gas from the Boston Consolidated Gas Company to make his illicit whiskey.

Following the raid which brought Loschie within the pale of the Federal law, the police made an investigation on the complaint of the gas company that there was quite a leakage in that section of the city.

The police say they found that Loschie had attached his gaspipe directly with the gas main for use in his still.

CITY REPAIRING PAVEMENTS

Officials Go to Work Following Expose of Dangerous Conditions

Following the Boston American's campaign for the immediate repair of streets, the city officials are filling holes and starting other work.

One of the most dangerous holes in the city—in Winthrop square—has been repaved. The Boston American printed a picture of this hole last Saturday. Other holes along Devonshire street were being filled today.

The repaving of Devonshire street in front of the postoffice was begun following the expose of conditions there.

Workmen were digging up 14 inches of concrete base of Devonshire street today in front of the postoffice to put new wires in for the Western Union. According to James Doherty, the city foreman in charge of repairing the street, this work should have been done a month ago by the Western Union.

"I will have Devonshire street paved from Water street to Franklin street within forty-eight hours after I get the wood blocks," said Doherty. "The blocks are stuck in a freight jam somewhere. New orders from the Mayor has applied to the government for help in pushing them through."

M. F. O'Brien, president of the National Federation of State, City and Town Employes, has inspected conditions on the Devonshire street job.

"The contractors were responsible for the condition of Devonshire street in front of the postoffice," said Mr. O'Brien, "during the time that the Western Union Company, the telephone company and the Edison electric light have made excavations large openings in this stretch of street in a distance of 240 feet and these openings were responsible for the bad condition of the paving."

A Sure Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, put just about four ounces of plain ordinary liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, as a rule, all of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.—Advertisement.

NUXATED IRON A DRIVING FORCE

BEHIND KEEN SUCCESSFUL MEN AND WOMEN

When you think of the successful men and women you know—people who are doing things worth while—you will find that they possess force, vim and energy—

force, vim and energy—

that simply brim over when the blood is filled with iron. Nuxated Iron by enriching the blood and creating new red blood cells, strengthens the nerves, rebuilds the weakened tissues and helps to instill renewed force and energy into the whole system.

Three million people use it annually as a tonic, strength and blood-builder.

MAKE THIS TEST

See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired; next take two five-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times a day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. Numbers of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while have most astonishingly increased their strength and endurance simply by taking iron in the proper form.

BEST BAY STATE GOLFERS IN BROOKLINE COUNTRY CLUB PLAY

ENTRY LIST A RECORD FOR STARS

Newton, Whittemore, Quimet, Wright and Guilford Among Those to Compete

By ROBERT E. HARLOW.

Although only the first sixteen will continue in the play for the Brookline Country Club cup on Thursday, the entry list is already the strongest for any tournament held this season in Massachusetts.

The qualifying round will assume more than usual importance, as it will be difficult to obtain a place in the match play.

F. C. Newton, the Massachusetts State golf team captain, will make his first appearance in competition since the North and South championship at Pinehurst.

Other members of the Country Club, including Parker Whittemore, will play. They will have plenty of competition, for practically all of the strongest golfers in the Boston district will start.

Francis Quimet will be on hand. So will Fred Wright, Jr., and possibly Jesse Guilford. Today is the last day for entries from other than Country Club members. Starting times may be obtained by calling Brookline 165.

There will be some consolation for those who fail to qualify at Brookline, for a two-day 18-hole medal play tournament will be held at the Salem Golf Club on Friday and Saturday. The weekly meeting of the Women's Golf Association will be held Thursday at Woodland.

Another fifteen-year-old golfer by the name of Jones, and but recently removed from Atlanta, home town of the widely known Bobby Jones, made his appearance yesterday at the Nassau Country Club, in the metropolitan district.

This fifteen-year-old Jones, is known as Willis G. Jones. He won the qualifying round of the Eastern Intercholastic Golf championship with a card of 84.

Willis formerly lived in Atlanta, right around the corner from Bobby, and the two Jones boys are well acquainted. Both began their golf at the age of fourteen, at the Atlanta Athletic Club. Willis Jones' parents moved to New York recently.

Willis may never win such a fine game as Bobby possesses, but he has made a good start.

Men golfers find it difficult to hit a good ball off the first tee when they are starting a tournament round and a number of spectators are gathered around to witness the efforts of the contestants. Women golfers have the same fault. At Belmont yesterday, out of forty starters in the Grissom cup trial, not more than six did themselves justice off the first tee.

Vincent Lawrence, former member of the Massachusetts State golf team, is author of an entertaining act which is on this week's bill at Keith's. Vin is now a resident of New York and plays his golf at the Siwanoy Country Club.

Worcester Country Club and Tatnuck Country Club golfers will have a team match at Worcester Saturday.

This is by far the best golfing weather of the Spring season and the players are packing every course in the Metropolitan District every afternoon, the long days making it possible for men to get out after business hours.

Harvard's golf team lost to Princeton.

GRACE AND MILLER TO BATTLE AT C. A. C.

Billy Grace of Milwaukee will clash with Charley K. O. Miller of the South End in the feature bout of twelve rounds at the Commercial A. C.'s show Friday night. Nap Lajoie of Whitman and Harry Silva of the West End will meet in the semi-final of ten frames. Bobby North of New York and Joe Gilman of Milwaukee will box eight rounds, while Young Boyd of the South End and Young Mitchell of Roxbury are billed to travel the six-round distance.

HARVARD FRESHMEN DOWN HUNTINGTON NINE

Two errors and a passed ball gave the Harvard freshmen a 1 to 0 ten inning victory over Huntington School. Morse, the school boy pitcher, held the freshmen to two hits.

JEFF JONES OF SECONDS HARVARD'S BABE RUTH

Captain Jeff Jones of the Harvard second team made two home runs and a pair of singles in five times at bat against Middlesex School, the latter being the short end of the decision 10 to 4.

BUGS BAER'S COLUMN

THE health statistics of the U. S. show that 100 per cent. of every eleven citizens have been knocked sour by reckless flivvers in the hands of careful drivers. Those health statistics are very sick.

GASOLINE has been hyped up so high that it takes a frugal chauffeur to get more than fourteen pedestrians on a gallon. The heavy cars are the birds that prune and iron the pedestrians for keeps, but it is very annoying to have a flivv run up your back like a chill.

AND it looks as if the public will never get a chance to squawk in rebuttal until they succeed in hornswoggling in a pedestrian among the other strangers in the President's Cabinet. The man who runs in November on the walking ticket will grab the office if his friends don't get knocked flivverish going to the voting booths.

THE first automobile in this country was an oil stove on wheels. When it fattened it cut into the rubber collar districts, the yams used to throw rocks, mortar and chimneys at it. Now, a material is reasonably safe because the price of building materials has gone up beyond the reach of the proletariat.

THROUGH the ingenuity of inventors, the motor companies have raised touring to the fourth dimension of assault and battery. They do everything to the victim but stuff him and hang his horns up in the trophy room. Millions of guys have sparred with a flivver, but no pedestrian ever grabbed a decision. This is the fault of the big cities who hire traffic cops instead of referees.

RUBBER heels may take the shock out of walking but they're in the wrong place for divvys. Until the game wardens cook up hunting laws limiting the tourists' bag, it looks as if most of us overall spangled pedestrians were going to solve the high cost of living by dying.

WHEN you see the public shadow boxing between two cars going in three directions, you realise why they call 'em the middle classes.

ALL this rough stuff would be vetoed if chauffeurs would adopt the Ten Carmandments written by a committee of crossing survivors.

The Tin Carmandments.

THOU shalt not steal up on the pedestrian.

THOU shalt not greet the pedestrian on the earth, neither shalt thou swat him into the heavens above the earth, nor into the waters below the earth.

SHOW mercy to the thousands that walk and obey the Tin Carmandments.

HONOR the pedestrian that thy day may be not long in the village boneyow.

THOU shalt not kill the pedestrian nor harass the jay walker.

THOU shalt not kill the pedestrian against the pedestrian and buzz the magisterate that he walketh signs during the times of prohibition.

THOU shalt not swat thy neighbor on the crossing, neither shall thee knock his manservant for a goal, nor his maidservant, nor his ox, nor anything that walks belonging to thy neighbor.

THOU shalt not ask thy neighbor to take a ride in order to get him to cast his vote for thine side.

SIX days shalt thou labor on the glizzards of your flivver and on the seventh day it shall refuse to flivv.

THOU shalt not wallop the jay walker on the bean and then giveth burnt offering of gold and silver to the ward heeler that he turneth the magisterate's heart against thy neighbor.

HONOR the jay walker as thyself, that the tribe of jay walkers be not exterminated even as the roc and the passenger pigeon.

MAINTAIN these Tin Carmandments, that joy shall reign through the land and that there shall be peace between Democratic administrations.

MACK ANSWERS ALEX McLEAN

Posts $500 Forfeit to Bind Match Between Abe Friedman and Terry Martin

By JACK CONWAY.

Eddie Mack, manager of Abe Friedman, is the kind of young man who doesn't let a challenge go by unnoticed.

"So Alex McLean wants to let Terry Martin fight Friedman at 118 pounds at 6 o'clock or 120 pounds ringside," said Mack as he breezed into the sporting department today. "Either of these weights is agreeable to Friedman.

"McLean also said something about the purse being split on a winner's and loser's basis. He murmured that a sixty-forty split would suit him. Why a sixty-forty one? I would like the greatest fought on a winner-take-all basis.

"And to show that I mean business I will post $500 as a forfeit which can go as a side bet at ringside odds."

Edward then took $500 out of his vest pocket and deposited it with the writer. Apparently the next move is now up to McLean.

BOSTON COLLEGE ENTERS 27 IN NEW ENGLAND MEET

Boston College has entered 27 men in the New England intercollegiate championships which will be held at Tech Friday and Saturday of this week. Coach Jack Ryder is confident that the winners of the Eastern's a few weeks ago will be prominent when the final points are counted.

Jake Driscoll, who broke the tape in both the 440 and 880 at Springfield, is entered in both events Saturday.

BASEBALL INJURY HALTS BOXING BOUT

The Triple A. will be dark tonight word having been received from Francis Schoell's manager that the boxer, while playing ball was hit in the arm by a ball and so badly bruised that he would be unable to box Johnny Clinton. Rather than attempt to make any new arrangement the club sent out notice that the tourney was off.

MAGIN DECLINES TO RACE PIANI

Butler Must Find Opponent for Italian by Next Saturday

Nat Butler, manager of the new Revere cycle track, is back on the job and batting for 1,000 in the Hard Luck League. After fixing up the weather man and having him lined up with a brand new solid gold season pass with the promise of some real racing weather along comes Jake Magin, who has signed up to race Orlando Piani, the Italian speed champion, with the announcement that it is all off and the card for the opening night, next Saturday, has to be revamped.

Magin, it seems, has met the foreign star a couple of times and had some hard job in keeping the Italian in sight and as the season is still very young Magin doesn't care to have another meeting with Piani.

Madonna, Egg and Chapman, who meet in the 25-mile motor paced race on Saturday night, are all reported in fine condition for a great race and all three are out for the honor of winning the first race on the new track.

Sure Way to Jinx No-Hit Pitching

When a pitcher of the home team is holding the visiting team to no hits, never make the bad break of mentioning the fact, even to your nearest neighbor.

It is the worst form to do so, the real "rooter" believes.

The effect will be to cause the visitors to "bang the ball out of the lot" if you do so.

We are assured on the best of "ball-bug" authority that this is the surest way of "losing the game" from the grandstand.

The psychology of the thing is hard to fathom, but having seen it worked out by a superstitious fan, we are inclined to take his word for it.

If you must do it, be sure to pick out some fan who does not look like a real "bug."

26 HARVARD OARSMEN GOING TO ITHACA, N. Y.

Twenty-six men will form the Harvard rowing squad which will leave tomorrow night for Ithaca to put on the finishing touches for Saturday's race with Cornell. Coach Haines is not ready to announce his varsity rowing order. The crew will row at Ithaca Thursday afternoon, twice on Friday and Saturday afternoon.

SWEDE TO FINISH TRAINING HERE

Orlando Expected to Give Lewis Hard Battle at Grand Thursday Night

Orlando, the Swedish heavyweight wrestling star, reaches Boston late today to finish his training for his match with Ed (Strangler) Lewis, which will be decided at the Grand Opera House on Thursday night. Orlando, in his last try against the big Kentuckian, gave the latter a battle that stuck out as one of the best heavyweight events of the season and in view of the steady improvement and consistently good work of the Swede since then he will undoubtedly give Lewis even a tougher task than in their other clash.

Lewis is due tomorrow. The big fellows will go best two out of three falls to a finish.

High Principles of Merchandising

Fair Price is Sound Policy

To our host of friends, the sellers of Coca-Cola to the public:

LET us have a little family discussion with the windows open so that the neighbors can hear it if they want to—about that ever-vital topic, Prices.

This is the one time above all others in our long career of sound merchandising when Price ought to be governed by Principle.

High principles of merchandising alone can be relied upon to combat high cost in many lines where the temptation to profiteering is strong because of public demand. To charge all that the traffic will bear is bad business at any time; at this time it is the worst of bad business for the Coca-Cola dealer whose maintenance of standard price for many years has not only established Coca-Cola's good faith with the American millions, but, together with its maintained quality and maintained advertising, has built the good-will of the product.

We ask our friends and partners in the most comprehensive system of distribution in American business to reflect that Coca-Cola was the beginning of the soft drink industry and has always been the backbone of the soda-fountain trade; has carried and built up many an enterprise which made it a trade "leader"; has far outsold any other soft drink in the world; and that for thirty years it made the 5-cent nickel the biggest buying power in a beverage. Independently of the cost of making it, The Coca-Cola Company has steadily maintained its delicious and refreshing quality insured above imitation, and maintained its advertising appeal to the increasing millions of its consumers without permitting any conditions of ordinary fluctuation to disturb the price. In no other way could Coca-Cola have built up the volume of business for you, Friend Dealer.

Sound merchandising alone can weather the storms. The policy that overlooks the insured dollar of tomorrow to pick up the loose dime of today points away from prosperity to demoralization. Your neighbor who is merely "getting while the getting is good" is at the same time dispensing bad will that will react upon him in the day of reckoning. Sane prices are the only sound policy and safeguard of success one year with another. Fair prices today are your option on the volume of trade that will forsake the profiteer tomorrow. You will be doing business at the same old stand.

Stand by high principles of merchandising and they will stand by you when you have need of them—

There is no more powerful and compelling example for good in these times than the merchant who stands on principle to forego opportunism—

There is no one force that will stand the nation in better stead.

RED SOX EVEN UP WITH WHITE

TIE SERIES BY 2 TO 1 VICTORY

Mike McNally Plays Brilliant Game in Field as Do Scott and Menosky

By NICK FLATLEY.

Straw hats and the Red Sox have broken out and are going big. The first real May day was very propitious for the hay helmets and the athletes. The series with the White Hose was evened up, and the teams today were engaged in one of those rubber games. Why they're called rubber is more than we know.

Anyhow, beating the champion Chisox, 2 to 1, evened up for Saturday's debacle, and showed that the local satellites are still the game, undiscouraged and fortunate crowd they were before the rain and a couple of Western defeats hit them.

That second game with the invaders was as hard fought as the opener, and consequently augurs a flock of competition today. Both teams are scrambling to get back on the pinnacle, and both have plenty of scrambling tools.

White Sox Had None of the Breaks

The Chicagoans didn't have any of the breaks while being defeated, but that didn't stop them for a minute. They were plugging away in the ninth, and only an eyelash decision at the plate checked them on the ultimate round. Joe Jackson slid in and was called out. It was one of those plays that might have gone either way, and the team losing out would have something ito screech about.

The Kidgleasons are screeching for everything—a sign that the grizzled and pugnacious director of theirs has them pulling together. They evince more pep than the champions last year could produce. But they are getting as good as they give right here in your city, and the Kid et al admit that the Red Sox are in the fight to the finish.

Back Up Sam Jones in Fine Fashion

The Fenway flock backed up Sam Jones' fine pitching in splendid style, while an error really handed Boston the victorious counter. It was made by the usually dependable Ray Schalk, too, showing that it was Boston's day. The teams appear so evenly matched that the least slip is the margin of victory.

There was plenty of fine fielding by both outfits, with Michael McNally the shining light. Michael broke out with his straw hats. He whacked two solid hits into the garden, scored the first run in the initial chapter by a brilliant exhibition of the difficult end of the double steal and, perpetrated a flock of stops that kept an extremely large Monday crowd in the best of spirits.

Michael certainly looks like the finest young infielder that has busted into the picture in the A. L. in a couple of seasons. In the third round, after two Chisox had thumped Samuel Jones safely, our hero scooped up a torrid grounder, nipped a runner going to second and pegged to first for a dual killing that sent the frame rollicking into history.

Did Nose Dive in Tagging Jackson

He sailed several yards into the air in the seventh after a wild throw of Walters, did a nose dive and came down with the ball on Joe Jackson, who thought he could steal. He flashed far over the foul line and back into right after a fly in the ninth. He captured it and ruined what undoubtedly would have been a fatal rally. Michael, you might say, is making good.

Scotty and the other Michael, Menosky, accompanied the youth in fine fielding. The other Michael stabbed a couple of bad bounders and prevented extra base hits. He made an unusually sharp throw to second and picked off Weaver trying to stretch a hit to start the fourth.

He went back to the fence, made a perfect rebound capture of Felsch's lusty double against the barrier, in the ninth, and whirled the ball, fast and true, to Scotty, who had hurried out into the garden. This was the crucial play of the pastime, as they say. It came in the ninth with two out, and Joseph Jackson first, Said Joseph attempted to score.

But the brilliant Scott relayed Menosky's peg with remarkable speed and accuracy. It shot right into Walter's hand just as the runner slid in, and spire Whitynm Dineen called the runner out and the exciting day was done.

To sum things up, the Red Sox came through with brilliant fielding stunts every time the pinch arrived, and it takes a real team to do that. The hostiles were forcing the issue all the way, but never could shake the Boston equilibrium. But those same hostiles are surely in the race for keeps this year.

They showed young Wilkinson in the box, and he had enough stuff to prove that many a club will have a tough time beating him during the next few months. He held up finely throughout and earned plenty of glory, even in defeat.

McNally Scores on Double Steal

Our Sox got a run in the first, when McNally one-shotted and went to third on Menosky's torrid clip to right. The fleet pair promptly put the double steal through, McNally hurtling across the saucer, a yard in front of the ball, which was handled perfectly by Schalk and Weaver. Chicago's Sox made their marker in the eighth on McMullin's double, and Schalk's mooseack.

The score that settled the combat was manufactured in the same round. With one gone, Menosky hit in front of the plate, and was winged by Schalk's hurried throw to first. Mike got to second and registered on a solid thump by Hendrix.

Allan Russell was the Red Sox selection for mound duty this afternoon, with Lefty Williams nominated by Gleason the Kid.

FRED JACKS MAKES BOW TO BOSTON FANS THURSDAY

Fred Jacks, English featherweight champion, will make his Boston debut at the Fenway A. A.'s show at Mechanics Building Thursday night. He is billed to meet Young Chaney of New York in the feature bout of twelve rounds. Jacks has been doing some good work in New Jersey and Philadelphia rings and hopes to hand Chaney an upset. The latter recently bested Bobby Josephs in a local ring.

Joey Connolly of Charlestown and Walter Morh of Brooklyn will meet in another twelve-rounder, while Phil Bloom of Brooklyn and Frank Confrey of New York are also down to travel twelve frames. There will be popular assessments for this show.

B. U. GIRLS PLAYING TENNIS TOURNAMENT

MADE ASSISTANT TENNIS MANAGER

David McK. Key of Chattanooga has been appointed second assistant manager of the Harvard tennis team. Richard A. Ehrlich of Brookline is his assistant.

RUDOLPH TO TOIL AGAINST BUCCOS

Day of Rest in Chicago Most Welcome to Stallings' Much Battered Hurling Corps

Pittsburgh, May 18—The Braves' more or less demoralized pitching staff enjoyed a much-needed day of rest when the last game in Chicago was prevented by rain. Earlier in the season George Stallings declared that if the pitchers only held up his team would be up there fighting all the time.

The staff has collapsed, temporarily at least, and therein lies the answer to why the Braves are now fifth in the National League standing when they were first less than a week ago.

But the case is by no means as hopeless as it looks and the Stallings troupe is apt to start on a rampage of victories at any time. Nine straight wins before they hit their present slump carried them to the top, from which they are now removed by about four and one-half games. Even in fifth position the Tribe enjoys one advantage over the pace making Reds, in that they have lost one game less than the Pat Morana.

Ball Players Figure on Lost Games Column

That is something to hearten them up in their hours of trouble, as baseball players always figure the chances of a club by the number of games lost rather than by any percentagen. A game not played they argue is always a game which may be won, whereas a game played and lost, as an opportunity, is gone forever.

The Pirates have been winning the bulk of their games recently, but they have been forced to travel at top-speed to accomplish the feat and are by no means as formidable as they appear on paper. Those long-distance affairs, particularly that last battle in which the Giants forced the Buccos to travel fifteen hard innings to gain the decision, have tired the players.

For today's affray Stallings had Rudolph ready to go in, with Scott held in reserve, while Hamilton looked like the man who would toll for the Pirates.

Les Mann Has Visions of Becoming Plutocrat

Just now Leslie Mann doesn't know whether he wants to play baseball or not. On the whole he thinks he had rather not. News has come to Mann that an oil well has been discovered on a lot adjoining one he has title to in Dundee, Tex., and now he is quite positive that he is about to become wealthy.

Whether he will get out of the game he has not yet made up his mind, but at any rate he intends to take a short furlough and trot to the Lone Star State to see what it is all about. If the oil should extend under Les' land it is more than likely that the Braves' outfielder will find his private business so engrossing that he will be unable to return.

Which is not exactly a boost for the Boston National league club. Stallings is reasonably well off as regards outer defence, men, but Mann, the most experienced gardener on the Braves' payroll, can hardly be dispensed with just now.

FINAL DRIVE ON BOXING BILL

Measure Is Virtually Certain of Passage in House Today; Calls for 10-Round Bouts

Enthused by their decisive victory, the proponents of the bill to legalize boxing were today marshalling their forces for the final drive in the House of Representatives. It is expected that the bill will have rolled through the House and be on its way to the Senate before the day's end.

The House quarrelled for an hour or two over the details of the two bills, one reported by the Legal Affairs Committee and the other by the Ways and Means Committee, but during the entire debate the contest waged solely over the form the bill would take.

No argument was made on the principle of whether the State should legalize boxing. The nearest approach to it was when Representative Young of Weston, the Republican floor leader, arguing for the Ways and Means Committee bill, which would charge a license fee based on the capacity of each club and against the Legal Affairs Committee bill, which provides that 5 per cent. of the total receipts of each exhibition shall be turned over by the club to the State, said "the State should not be put in the position of taking part of the profits from this business."

Legal Affairs Committee Bill is Adopted

The Legal Affairs Committee prevailed. The vote was 99 to 42 for the bill, as against the Ways and Means Committee bill. Then the bill was given a reading by a voice vote which was practically unanimous.

The bill to which the House gave its approval legalizes ten-round decision bouts with six-ounce gloves. Every club would have to be incorporated and licensed, also all participants from the most expert wielder of the towel to the referee himself. A boxing commission of three members would be in charge. The bill has a referendum to the cities and towns.

McCORMACK READY FOR BOBBY JOSEPHS

"Don't intend to take up much of your time," whispered Jim McDonald as he glided in front of the sporting desk today. "Just dropped in to let you know that Dan McCormack now weighs 125 pounds, won three fights within a week and is prepared to box Bobby Josephs or any other 126-pounders; also that George Robinson is still waiting for Johnny Wilson to agree to meet him; say something about the way Jack Renault is knocking 'em for goals, and also try to find a little space to let the world know Sailor Trembly is back in condition and punching like a Dempsey. The old stable is going on high and prepared for a killing."

FRIZETTI TO MEET CLEVELAND DOWNES

Jimmy Frizetti, Brockton lightweight, has been matched to meet Cleveland Johnny Downes in a twelve-round bout at the Coliseum, A. C. of Quincy, Thursday night. Frizetti has piled up a creditable array of victories and is confident he will dispose of Downes. The latter beat Charley Parker at Brockton last week and feels sure he will score another win at Quincy.

VINCENT MARTIN AND CHARLEY BERGIN TO BOX

Vincent Martin, who has developed into a kayo king, will swap blows with Charley Bergin of New Haven at the Queen City A. C. in Chester tonight. Bergin is a strong, willing fighter and will give Martin plenty of opposition. Martin has put up some of his best battles in Manchester and as a result a large crowd is sure to be on hand to witness the festivities.

PADDY OWENS WINS OVER HARRY MARTIN

Paddy Owens of Cambridge defeated Harry Martin of Providence in twelve rounds at the Union Square A. C., Somerville. Johnny Emery of Somerville lost in eight rounds to Tony Vitalli of Brighton. Young Duffy knocked out Young Cunningham of Cambridge in the first round, and Young Barbero of Cambridge quit to Neddo Flynn of Somerville in the first.

FLYNN GOING TO COAST WITH FRANKIE CALLAHAN

When Frankie Callahan goes to Portland, Ore., the latter part of this month to start training for his bout with Benny Leonard, he will be accompanied by Paddy Flynn of Everett. THE YOUNG DIANA

An Experiment of the Future

Story of Extraordinary Mystery, in Which the Heroine Holds Key to Youth and Beauty

By Marie Corelli

"I AM clothed with a life venture made of strange and imperishable stuff.—I cannot begin to describe or understand it, except as an organization free from all pain and grossness—and what is more positive still—free from all feeling!"

She paused here, interested in the puzzle of her thoughts. Raising her eyes, she looked out at the divine beauty of the night.

Strangest Part

"Yes," she went on musing—"That is the strangest part of it!—I have no feeling. This is the work of science—therefore my condition will be within reach of all who care to accept it. I look out at the garden—the moonlight—but not as I used to look. They have no feeling, and so seem just a natural part of myself. They do not move me to any more sensation than the recognition that they live as I do, with me and for me. If I can get hold of myself at all surely, I think my chief consciousness is that of power—power, with no regard for its exercise or result."

She waited again, disentangling her mind from all clinging or vague recollections.

"This man, Feodor Dimitrius, interested me at one time," she said. "His utter selfishness and callous absorption in his own studies moved me almost to pain. Now he does not interest me at all. His mother is kind—very simple—very stupid and well-meaning—but I could not stay with her for long. Who else must I remember?"

Suddenly she laughed.

"Ta and Ma!" she exclaimed—"I must not forget them! Those dear, respectable parents of mine, who only cared for me as long as I was an interesting object to themselves, and found me 'in the way' when their interest ceased! Mighty Pa! Wouldn't he just love to be rejuvenated and turned out as a sort of new Faustus, amorous and reckless of everybody's feelings—but his own! Oh, yes, I mustn't forget Pa! I'm young enough to wear white now!—I'll go and see him as soon as I get back to England—before Ma's best mourning gown grows rusty!" She laughed again, the most enchanting dimples lightening her face as mirth radiated from her lips and eyes—then all at once she became serious, almost stern, and stood up as though lifted erect by some thought which impelled action. One hand clenched involuntarily.

"Captain the Honorable Reginald Cleeve!" she said, in slow tones of emphatic scorn—"Especially the Honorable! I must not forget him! —or his fat wife!—or his appallingly hideous and stupid children! I must look at them, and round not only must I look at them they must look at me!"

Her hand relaxed—her eyes, limpid and lustrous, turned again towards the open window and moonlit Summer night.

"Yet—is vengeance worth while?" she mused—"Vengeance on a mote —a worm—a low soul such as that of the man I once almost worshipped? Yes!—the gods know it is worth while to punish a liar and traitor! When the world becomes unclean and full of falsehood a great war is sent to purge its foulness—when a man destroys a life's happiness it is just that his own happiness should also be destroyed."

She had come to the conclusion of her meditations, and seeing the hour was ten o'clock, she opened her door and put the untouched little supper-table with all its delicacies outside in the entresol to be cleared away; then locking herself in for the night, prepared to go to bed. It was now that a sudden thrill of fear appeared through her beautiful "new" organization—the nervous idea that perhaps she should not be able to pray! She took herself severely to task for this thought.

"All things are of God!" she said, aloud—"Whatever science has made of me I can be nothing without His will. To Him belong the sun and stars, and to Him I may render thanks without fear."

She Knelt Down

She knelt down and uttered the familiar "Our Father" in slow, soft tones of humility and devotion. To anyone who could have watched her praying thus, she would have seemed

"A splendid angel newly drest
Save wings, for heaven!"

And when she laid her head on her pillow she fell asleep as sweetly as a young child, her breathing slight, her dreamless unconsciousness as perfect.

The morning found her refreshed by her slumber, stronger and more self-possessed than before; and when clad in her ordinary little white batiste gown she looked, as indeed she was bodily, if not mentally, a mere slip of a girl—a lovely girl, slender as a reed and fair as a lily, radiating in every expression and movement with an altogether extraordinary beauty. After the breakfast hour came Madame Dimitrius, eager, curious, affectionate; but at first sight of her, stood as though rooted to the floor, and began to tremble so violently that Diana put an arm about her to save her from falling. But, with a white, scared face and repelling hand, the old woman pushed her aside.

"Do not touch me, please!" she said, in feeble, quavering tones—"I—I did not expect this. I was prepared for much—but not this!—this is devil's work! Oh, my son, my son! He is possessed by the powers of evil!—may God deliver him! No, no!"—this, as Diana, with her beautiful smile of uplifted sweetness and tolerance, strove to speak—"Nothing you can say will alter it! It is impossible that such a thing could be done without rebellion against the laws of God! You—you are not Diana May—you are some other creature, not made of flesh and blood!"

Possibly Right

Diana heard her with a gentle patience.

"Very possibly you are right," she said, quietly. "Whatever I am made of must be some of God's own material, since there is nothing existent without Him! Why, unless there is a devil, the devil himself cannot exist apart from God!"

Madame Dimitrius uttered a pained cry, and then began to sob hysterically.

"Oh, do not speak to me, do not speak to me!" she wailed. "My son, my son! My Feodor! His soul is the prey of some evil spirit—and it seems to me as if you are that spirit's form and voice! You are beautiful—but not with merely a woman's beauty!—his science has called some strange power to him —you are that power!—you will be his doom!" She wrung her hands nervously, and moaning, "Let me go!—let me go!" turned to leave the room.

Diana stood apart, making no effort to detain her. A look of wondering compassion filled her lovely eyes.

"Poor woman!" she breathed softly. "Poor weak, worn soul!"

Then suddenly she spoke aloud in clear, sweet, decisive tones.

"Dear Madame," she said—"you distress yourself without cause! You need not be afraid of me—I will do you no harm! As for your son, his fate is in his own hands; he assumes to be master of it. I shall not interfere with him or with you—for now I shall leave you both forever! I have submitted myself to his orders—I have been his paid 'subject,' and he cannot complain of any want of obedience on my part—his experiment has succeeded. Nothing therefore now remains for me to do here, and he has no further need of me. I promise you I will go as quickly as I can!—and if, as you say, I am not human, why no much the worse for humanity!"

Royally Triumphant

She smiled, and her attitude and expression were royally triumphant. Madame Dimitrius had reached the door of the apartment, and with her hand leaning against it turned back to look at her in evident terror. Then she essayed to speak again.

"I am sorry," she faltered—"if I seem strange and harsh—but you are not Diana May—not the woman I knew! She had grown younger and prettier under my son's treatment—but you!—you are a mere girl!—and I feel—I know you are not, you cannot, be human!"

A light of something like scorn flashed from Diana's eyes.

"Is humanity so valuable?" she asked.

But this question was more than enough for Madame Dimitrius. With a shuddering exclamation of something like utter despair, she hurriedly opened the door, and stumbled blindly out into the corridor, there to be caught in the arms of her son, who was coming to Diana's room.

"Why, mother!" he ejaculated—"what is this?"

Diana stood at her half-open door, looking at them both like a young angel at the gate of Paradise.

"Your mother is frightened of me," she explained gently. "She says I am not human. I daresay that's very likely! But do try and comfort her, and tell her that I have no evil intentions towards her or you. And that I am going away as soon as you will allow me to do so."

His brows contracted.

"Mother," he said reproachfully, "is this how you keep your promise to me? I gave you my confidence—you see the full success of my great experiment—and yet you reward me thus?"

Love Teaches

She clung to him desperately.

"Feodor!—Feodor!" she cried—"My son—my only child! You shall not blame me—me, your mother! I love you, Feodor!—and love teaches many things! Oh, my son! —you have drawn from your science something that is not of this world!—something that has no feeling—no emotion!—this creature of your making is not Diana!"

As she spoke her face grew livid—she beat the air with her feeble old hands, as though she fought some invisible foe, and fell in a dead faint.

Quickly Dimitrius lifted her in his arms, and laid her on the sofa in Diana's sitting room. Diana came to his aid, and deftly and tenderly bathed her forehead and hands with cool water. When she showed signs of returning consciousness Diana said whisperingly:

"I will go now! She must not be frightened again—she must not see me when she wakes. You understand? Poor, dear old lady! She imagines I am not human, and she has told me I shall be your doom!" She smiled. "Do you think I shall?"

Her loveliness shone upon him like a light too brilliant to endure. His heart beat furiously, but he would not look at her—he bent his head over his mother's passive figure, hugging himself with remorseful—and answered nothing.

She waited a minute—then added —"You will arrange for my leaving here as soon as possible? After what she has said, it will be best for your mother that I should go at once."

Then, and then only, he lifted his dark eyes—they were sad and strained.

"I will arrange everything," he said. "No doubt the sooner we part, the better?"

She smiled again—then moved swiftly away into her bedroom and locked the door. Slowly Madame Dimitrius recovered and looked around her with an alarmed expression.

"She has gone?"

"Yes," her son replied, with a bitterness he could not restrain. "She has gone!—and she will get You have driven away the loveliest thing ever seen on earth! my creation! Through you she will leave me altogether—and yet you say you love me!"

"I do! I do love you!" cried his mother, weeping. "Feodor, Feodor, I love you as no other can or will! I love you, and by my love I claim your soul! I claim it from the powers of evil!—I claim it for God!"

ABOUT OUR GOOD FRIEND

Sims

Copyright, 1920, by The Ledger Syndicate.

SIMS

VARIATIONS — Simms, Simpson, Simonds, Symonds, Simmonds, Symondson.

RACIAL ORIGIN—Anglo-Saxon.

SOURCE—A biblical given name.

STRANGELY enough, the connection between the family name Sims and the biblical name of Simon is one which does not occur to most people. Yet today it is not unusual for a man whose christian name is Simon to be called "Sime" by his friends.

Back in the days before the old Anglo-Saxons finally went down before the swords of William the Conqueror and his Norman-French army, in the days before family names had been thought of by any nation other than the Romans, these Anglo-Saxons delighted in nicknames, apparently. Simon, or Simeon was a popular name in England then, and they shortened it to Sim. They were also fond of diminutive endings, of which "kin" was one (it corresponds to the German "chen" of today). Hence the old parchments often contain the names Simkin, meaning "little Sim," or Simkyn. Later the Normans used the diminutive ending "et," and Symonets began to appear on the records.

Then, as the population grew, along about the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, the method of identifying different men of the same name by telling whose sons they were grew to the point where the description such as "Sim's son," became permanent in the family and was shortened to Simson. Sims is this name with the final "on" dropped.

Tomorrow—Daniels.

When a Girl Marries

By Ann Lisle

WHEN Jim came home I had his tuxedo hung out and had laid on his bed a pleated white shirt, fitted with studs and links. Across my chaise longue was my dinner dress of lavender chiffon.

"What's this? What's this?" asked Jim, passing his hand wearily across his forehead, "I'd clean forgotten this was the night for us to dine at the new roof garden with Neal and Phoebikins. I'll have to buck up for the happy occasion."

"Neal's party isn't till day after tomorrow," I explained. "This is a nice little home dinner. Only we two and Daisy Condon and Carl Booth.

"Daisy!" repeated Jim irritably. "Hate the name ugly daunting thing. Who are these new people, anyway?"

Taking one thing at a time, I replied:

"She isn't ugly and daunting—Daisy, I mean. She's sweet and simple. Like a shy wood-nymph. She's so quiet she even seems colorless at first. And Carl's an old friend, on the advertising staff of Haldane's. Don't you remember him? I was with him the night—"

"Oh, old business acquaintance," interrupted Jim. "Then we won't dress. It would only embarrass 'em. He'll probably come in blue serge and a red tie. And who's your shy Violet?"

"Daisy—types at Haldane's." I replied hesitatingly, starting to be overwhelmed, as usual, by the Harrison social superiority. Then, disgusted a such snobbery, I continued in a different strain: "Jim, these Haldane people were my friends before I knew you. Good friends, too. And I deserted them for you. Daisy told me today that her sister Kate—my best friend in the old days—died on influenza this Winter. She wanted to see me before she went and they didn't know where to find me. That hurt. I'd like to make it up by being sweet to Kate's little sister."

Jim in Accord

"So that's it!" Jim's eyes flashed at me warmly. "You shall be sold mother to Cinderella if you like, dear. And I'll help. But it would be a rotten beginning to embarrass her within an inch of her life by all this finery. I'll wear a business suit to be in keeping with Booth's blue serge. And you get into that little dark thingumabob with the white collar."

"But I thought it would be so nice to make it seem like a party," I argued uneasily.

"Never do in the world," said Jim.

I yielded to his greater social knowledge, hung away my pretty pale chiffon and got out the sombre navy blue georgette. Then Jim disappeared for his bath and shave. Presently—a trim-shouldered, slim-waisted, pongee-shirted figure, he reappeared to slouch down in a chair beside my dressing table and watch coolly while I did my hair. A favorite trick of Jim's this, and I love it even on the occasions when his mischievous fingers pull down the soft waves of my hair just as I have persuaded them into place.

"Neal and I lunched together today," he announced. "I stopped by for him. Nice offices they have and the boy stands acea high."

Romantic Serial by a Noted Author

"Then you saw Pat?" I asked, wondering how Jim had treated this ex-member of his family.

"Yes. Deuce of a way with him that fellow has. And seems to have a pretty good business head, too. Winter. She wanted to see me before she went and they didn't know where to find me. That hurt. I'd like to make it up by being sweet to Kate's little sister."

Sneaked Out Alone

"Having to sneak out all by himself while you and Neal went chummily together," I said sympathetically, as I thrust two big shell pins in the coils of my hair.

"Not alone. The Sturges girl was waiting for him," replied Jim, either accepting it with masculine blindness or too completely out of sympathy with my feminine cares. He seemed much more occupied with his next remark, "Funny thing, Neal knew a lot of information about the old Harrison place yet. It isn't down in the books under its own title nor in the books of the Sturges Company nor listed to the folks who bought it in. The boy is going over in the main office this afternoon and look it up on their books. I've asked him to keep it quiet until I can come along and make my offer."

The Well Kept Bedroom

By Loretto C. Lynch

SHE was rated a good housekeeper by her more careless neighbors, yet the bedroom of her home was always so disordered one wondered why folks only judge a housewife's merit by the order of her always well-kept living-room. There is no room in the house, however, that should reflect peace and comfort more so than the bedroom. And whether the furnishings be of the simplest or the more elaborate varieties, the bedroom should be kept scrupulously clean and invite one to relax.

Unfortunately, we are not all able to select the kind of house or rooms best suited to our needs and the vast majority of us have to live in houses built by others. But in general, bedrooms require about the same general care whether they are plain or quite elaborate. The daily care includes the airing of the room and closets, airing and making the bed, dusting, cleaning the floor and removing the slops and bringing fresh water if there is no running water in the room for bathing.

Early training always counts and the busy mother who teaches her youngsters to remove the bed clothes upon rising and hang them singly by the open window over a screen or chair, taking care they do not touch the floor, will find the bed ready to make after youngsters get off to school.

Once every week or two the blankets should be hung out in the sunshine and aired for a couple of hours. Blankets should be washed at least twice a year. Pillows and mattresses should be aired and beaten in the sunshine as often as possible. A vacuum cleaner helps to keep the mattress sanitary.

To make the bed, place the cover pad on and over it lay the under sheet straight. Tuck it in neatly top and bottom and fold the sides under straight, making angles at the corners. Put on the upper sheet, then the blankets, and lastly the top cover. Put on pillowslips and stand the pillows in place.

Thousands of homes throughout the country still have washstands in the bedrooms with the regulation china set, including pitcher, bowl and the like. The washstand cannot be neglected a day without causing an unpleasant odor. Jars containing slops should be rinsed in cold water and then thoroughly washed in lukewarm soapsuds, dried and aired. Avoid the use of boiling hot water, as it may cause the glaze to crackle and so become unsanitary. Wash and dry the other articles and refill the water pitcher. See that there are towels on the towel rack and soap in the soap dish.

Even in these modern days every bedroom might do well to possess a candle in a candlestick and a box of safety matches. For offtimes electric lights refuse to work or the gas may be temporarily out of order.

The dresser or dressing table should be wiped off with a soft cloth, the linen covers smoothly replaced and the toilet articles rearranged. Hair receiver, ash receiver or scrap basket should have daily attention.

Too Many Possibilities

Sweet Sybil tripped blithely into the country postoffice.

"I want to know," she demanded with a tell-tale blush as she handed the clerk a pink communication addressed to her lover, "how long it will be before I get an answer to this letter?"

"That depends," he answered; "if he's in jail they will let him write once a month only; if he's broke, he'll have to wait till he can earn the price of a stamp, and I have no data upon which to base an opinion of his earning capacities. If he's ill in bed he may not care to dictate his heart's sentiments to a cold, disinterested third party, and if it's small beer they won't let him write at all; ditto, if he's dead. Then, again, if he's got a new girl"——

At which moment he realized that the fair Sybil had flown.

All About It

Teacher asked the class to write an essay on the subject of "Anatomy."

"Anatomy is the human body. It is divided into three parts, the head, the chest and the stummick. The head holds the skull and the brains, if they is any; the chest holds the liver, and the stummick holds the food and the vowels, which is a e i o and u and sometimes y."

New colored flakes

—give lovelier shades of every color

DRESSES, little blouses, rompers—you can make them truer, prettier shades than you could ever get before—with Twink, the new colored flakes.

Twink is made by a wonderful new method for producing colors that makes it possible to get more exquisite shades than have ever before been obtained.

When it was found that in this product any fashionable shade could be produced, the authorities on fashion colors were asked to select the smartest colors for this season. Twink was then made to match these colors.

The Twink flakes dissolve instantly in boiling water. You swish the small garment about in the rich lather and squeeze the suds through the fabric. In a twinkling you have restored its first bright color, or given it some charming new shade.

The Twink colors are so fast that you can wash a garment several times before you need Twink it again. Twink will not injure any fabric that pure water will not harm.

Get two or three packages of Twink today. Your druggist, the department store, and the 5 and 10 cent stores have Twink. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

For restoring color and for giving these new exquisite colors Twink is as perfect as Lux is for all fine laundering

SPRING MEDICINE

The body is like a machine; it has to be adjusted to the conditions under which it lives. Spring marks the change from cold weather to hot weather conditions.

Hence, in Spring, body cells become tired or lazy and need help in repairing and rebuilding the machine. To resist the effects of heat and its hardships. Drugs may stimulate temporary action. But Father John's Medicine contains no drugs, no alcohol, but one of Nature's great food-medicines, which is easily digested and promptly made use of by body cells. In use for over sixty years. Sale Solid Silver Army Wrist WATCHES

For Boston and Vicinity

$5 Guaranteed 20 Years Jewelled Adjusted

Price During the War $25

Taking into consideration that there were more than one thousand dealers after this lot of Army Watches, much credit is due Mr. Freiman, president of the Lenox Jewelry Co., for his untiring efforts in securing them, which numbered many thousands each, for the purpose of the resale in Boston. During the war these rugged little timepieces could not be made fast enough to supply the United States Army at $25.00 each. Every movement is beautifully jewelled and adjusted and so marked. Furthermore, this company's guarantee goes with every one for 20 years. We now offer them for sale at $5.00 each, with the distinct understanding that the money (every cent of it) will be refunded if watches as good as these in any particular can be purchased elsewhere for less than $25.00. Mail orders will be filled if accompanied by remittance for any number. Send cash, check or registered money order. Only three watches sold to each customer. Watches are Solid Silver, through and through, and so stamped by the Government, so there can be no mistake. They are also all fitted with non-breakable glass—but will actually bear a man's weight without breaking.

The higher grades will be sold as follows:

Your Last Chance To Get In

If you own an automobile you should answer this Announcement, and if you don't own one you should answer it just the same.

There is one established and highly successful Company in this country, making fine motor cars, which has decided to do something very human, very popular, and greatly to the advantage of the limited number of men and women who may participate in the cash profits of the plan.

The car manufactured by this Company is in the very top class of American cars, sells for over $5,000, and is distributed to wealthy buyers through a superb sales organization covering 22 leading cities.

Additional capital is now going into this business to increase output, and the Company has said, "We are going to let the people have this particular issue of our Preferred Stock and give them a fair bonus of Common Stock, carrying with it additional contingent profit. We will make the individual allotments small, and the terms of payment easy enough to meet the circumstances of men and women of moderate means or moderate salary."

Now you know why this Announcement is appearing in this newspaper.

This fine-car Company has made money from the start. Its entire factory product for the fiscal years of 1920 and 1921 is already sold, with a liberal profit determined in advance by contracts now on its books for approximately $9,000,000 worth of cars, retail value!

The most prominent people in Boston own this famous car and ride in it—right past your door.

You are invited to send your name and address, in order that you may receive (by mail) some vital and interesting particulars that will prove greatly to your financial advantage. Also a certain lively Picture Book relating to this business—all without cost or obligation on your part.

Strike Three!

Yes, this is "strike three!" But you are not necessarily "out." You still have one more chance—today. You can answer this LAST Announcement—the final one of THREE which have appeared in the Boston newspapers. Hundreds of men and women who have already answered the first two Announcements are very glad they did it. They have learned something about how to take profits out of the manufacture of fine motor cars. By sending your name and address NOW you will still be in time to get the rare information which has been prepared for you.

Stocks Irregular and Dull; Money Renews at 7%

TONE IS STEADY IN BOSTON

Local Market Irregular and Very Quiet; Prices Lower on the Curb

The majority of issues to show price changes on the Boston list when the market opened sold a little higher, but there were enough to decline to make the movement irregular. The market remained mixed as to trend during the morning, with fluctuations fractional barring a few issues. Trading was of small volume and not enlivened by anything calculated to inspire public interest. Carson Hill and Bigheart were the two issues most in evidence. They advanced.

Among stocks to advance a fraction were Boston and Maine, New Haven, Carson Hill, Bigheart, United Drug common, Eastern Manufacturing, Davis Daly and West End.

Issues to recede a point or more included Swift International, Agricultural Chemical and Waltham Watch, while small losses were sustained by Swift & Co., North Butte, Calumet and Arizona, Old Dominion, International Cement and New Cornelia.

CURB MARKET WAS WEAK.

The Curb market was weak at the opening and afterwards, besides being dull and without individual feature. At the start Eureka and Seven Metals were higher, while Nevada and Montana, Imperial, Jerome Verde, Ramloy and White Oil were off. There were more stocks to open unchanged than the total of issues to fluctuate. Mutual trust led in activity.

At the end of an hour there was not a gain on the list. White Oil was off a point at 22½. Mutual trust was off 2 cents at 80 cents, after selling as low as 42 cents.

OIL AND SUGAR ISSUES UP

Steels Are Irregular and Motors Weak; Trading Slack From Opening

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Stocks were irregular in New York at noon but with the majority showing small gains. Trading was very slack from the opening until the end of the morning. First hour transactions totalled less than 140,000 shares. Oils and sugars showed the most class strength. Steels were irregular and motors weak. Coil money renewed at 7 per cent. Foreign exchange rates were firm and higher as a rule.

Issues to show the largest gains were American Sugar, Cuban American Sugar, Mexican Petroleum, United Fruit, Pan American, Central Leather, Baldwin and Crucible. They were up from one to three points at their highest. Royal Dutch declined two points. Most losses were small.

PRICE MOVEMENT MIXED.

The price movement was mixed at the opening, but the undertone was good and, although recessions were the rule for a few minutes, losses were slight in most instances and a rally quickly ensued. Steels began lower and oils higher, while motors were irregular, with a tendency to sag. Rails were steady, but very quiet. Sugars were a strong group. They were about the only early feature. Cuban American made the largest gain in this department during the first hour. Mexican Petroleum was the strongest oil and Royal Dutch the weakest, while Crucible made the best showing among steels. Motors had an unusually narrow range and, reviewing the list as a whole, it may be said that fluctuations averaged small up to mid-morning.

TRADERS AWAITED EVENTS.

The market was hesitant because traders are awaiting events. It was believed that something important might develop at the conference today by the Federal Reserve Board and Reserve Bank officials. The decline of the call rate to 6 per cent yesterday did not induce much buying of stocks. The public is holding aloof. What strength the market showed was the result of covering of shorts.

Traffic congestion is the most depressing influence at present. But in financial districts not much attention was given reports that the government would resume control of carriers. The attitude of railroad managers toward wage advances is regarded as indicating an understanding with employes that will go far toward eliminating the strike peril.

WHAT RAILROADS NEED.

It is believed that both the government and the public are now recognizing the fact that the welfare of the country depends upon providing carriers with their two supreme requirements. They are higher rates and more equipment. Given the money the roads will provide the cars and the cars to operate them. If as much money had been spent on building freight cars and locomotives as has been spent upon pleasure automobiles during the last five years the railroads would be able to do the transporting of goods and materials that industries and business require. Now difficulties have culminated in a crisis. If cars don't move factories will have to close. The time for arguments and alibis is over. Action is imperative.

WM. A. READ & CO. BUY CANADIAN RAIL ISSUE

William A. Read & Co. have bought of the Canadian government $16,000,000 fifteen-year 7 per cent sinking fund equipment trust gold certificates of the Canadian National Railways. The new offerings retains the advantages of the serial equipment trust plan by providing equal semi-annual payments sufficient to retire the entire issue by the maturity date, May 1, 1935. These payments, instead of being used to retire specific maturities, must be used by the trustees to purchase certificates in the open market at or below par, if obtainable. The fixed rentals may be increased from time to time to buy certificates at a premium if the railways elect.

If the semi-annual payment is not thus used up by the compulsory purchase of the certificates up to par, or the optional purchase at a premium, the payments must be invested in the obligations of the Dominion of Canada maturing at or before the maturity date of the certificates.

Raw Sugar Receipts

From January 1 this year to May 7 raw sugar receipts at Boston, New York, Philadelphia and New Orleans totalled 3,281,868,000 pounds, or approximately 81,000,000 pounds more than during the corresponding period last year.

15-Year 7% Equipment Trust Gold Certificates

Issued under the Philadelphia Plan

Dated May 1, 1920 — Total Authorized $15,000,000 — Due May 1, 1935

In coupon form of $1,000 denomination, with provision for registration of principal. Dividends payable May 1 and November 1. The company agrees to pay the United States Normal Income Tax up to 2% if exemption is not claimed by the Certificate holder. Principal and dividends payable at the office of Girard Trust Company, Philadelphia, Trustee, and at the office of Wm. A. Read & Co., New York.

Semi-annual payments of $500,000 provide for the retirement of the Certificates by maturity but the issue is not callable

The information given below is summarized from a letter from Mr. A. J. Mitchell, Vice-President of the Canadian National Railways:

These $15,000,000 Certificates are issued against new railway equipment costing $20,024,500, an initial payment of $5,024,500 or over 25% of the cash contract cost being made.

Title to all equipment remains vested in Girard Trust Company, Philadelphia, Trustee, for the benefit of the Certificate holders. The equipment is leased for rentals equal to the principal and dividends of the Certificates together with insurance, taxes and all other charges.

Semi-annual payments of $500,000 each beginning November 1, 1920, must be used by the Trustee to purchase certificates at or under par, if obtainable. At the end of each six months any unexpended balance must be used at the direction of the railway to purchase either certificates or Canadian Government obligations due before the maturity date of the certificates. Certificates may be purchased at a premium and tendered by the Railway Company to the Trustee, under the foregoing provision.

Under the provisions of the Statutes of Canada, the rentals payable under the lease of this equipment rank as a railway working expenditure and constitute a claim against earnings prior to both principal and interest of mortgage debt.

The Dominion Parliament has authorized the incorporation of the Canadian National Railways to take over the Government owned railways. The system will comprise 22,275 miles extending from Halifax on the Atlantic Coast to Vancouver on the Pacific Coast, touching practically every important center in Canada. The Government now owns the Canadian Northern, National Transcontinental, and Intercolonial railways, and the system is to include the Grand Trunk Railway and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway.

We offer these Certificates when, as and if issued and subject to approval of legality by our counsel.

MEASURES THAT WOULD CURE MOST OF THE TROUBLES AND TENDENCIES WHICH DISTRESS AND ALARM US TODAY

(1) To nominate for the Presidency by direct nomination and to elect by popular vote.
(2) To elect the Cabinet officers and make them responsible to Congress.
(3) To deprive the President of the power of patronage; to put all public offices as nearly as possible under Civil Service, and have appointments made by a committee of Congress.
(4) To elect Federal Judges, including the Supreme Court Justices, by popular vote.
(5) To apply the Initiative, the Referendum and the Recall to national matters.

Bad Streets Lower the City's Wealth and Reputation

From every point of view it is false economy to let the streets get into disrepair. It makes it cost a great deal more when the streets are repaired than is saved now. It shortens the life of the streets and increases the obsolescence and the maintenance charges.

But more than that, it decreases general values in the city; it disgusts the strangers within our gates; it reduces the value of real estate on an ill-kept street; it reduces the life of a car, automobiles and other vehicles which have to travel over such streets and the money cost of the destructiveness of a bad street to automobiles and wagons is very great indeed.

There is no worse example of penny wisdom and pound folly than the postponing of proper maintenance work on our streets.

The citizens of West Roxbury ought to be joined by the citizens all over the city in protest against this condition. If Mayor Peters really felt that the citizens were behind him in an effort to improve our streets and would not grouch at the cost, we are confident that he would do his utmost to improve them.

Wages of the State Employes Should Be Increased

State employes have presented petitions for raises in pay and for bonuses. Either would be acceptable to them.

It always was and always ought to be the working principle of our American Governments that the Governments should be the ideal employers, setting standards which other employers in private business should be inspired to emulate.

Now, the power of the labor organizations, and the scarcity of labor, has enabled the workman to increase his pay out of all proportion to the increase which those in the public service have been able to obtain. There can be no doubt that the State employes have made out a conclusive case in favor of increasing their wages. It is little satisfaction to them, and it little accords with justice, to have State Supervisor White tell them that if they have been in the service ten years they ought to get out. Rather should he tell them they should stay in if they are good men and women. The State ought to be the most important service of all.

No man ought to be too good for the public service. If he is good in private service he ought to be better employed in the public service.

Johnson's Promises Based on Past Performances

Mr. Hoover uttered a great truth about Senator Johnson and his character and achievements as a public servant when he explained why the people of California gave Senator Johnson such an overwhelming endorsement in his candidacy for the Republican nomination for President against Mr. Hoover.

Mr. Hoover says that Senator Johnson won so decisively and almost so unanimously, because the pepole of California felt a sense of loyalty for him on account of the splendid service which he rendered to them when he freed their State from corporation control as Governor of California.

Is there any other candidate for any party today concerning whom any responsible citizen can say as much as Mr. Hoover felt obliged to say concerning Senator Johnson's public record? Has there been any man nominated for President on either the Democratic or Republican ticket since the Civil War concerning whom a responsible citizen has ever made such a declaration?

"He freed his State from corporation domination." Corporation domination is an American idiomatic expression for the dominance of special privelege, the reign of highly organized and highly financed greed. It is the negation of democracy. It represents a political condition worse than an autocracy, because plutocracy is ninety-nine times out of a hundred worse than autocracy. It is more vulgar, less responsible, more brutal and more unmoral.

Autocracy has generally a standard of its own to which it conforms. It has generally a sense of responsibility which it respects. But a plutocracy has not a single virtue, and it was a plutocracy, headed by the Southern Pacific Railroad, which the Hearst newspapers in California have fought since they first came into existence, that Governor Johnson led in the task of driving from political power. The cleaning of the Augean stables was not a greater task, and Hercules in mythology did not perform it more effectively than Johnson in real life, within a few years, cleaned out California of a corrupt plutocracy.

What kind of a man do the American people need most today? What ails America most? What influences are behind the violations of the constitutional rights of free speech, free press and free peaceable assembly? How much are the necessaries of life artificially increased by unlawful conspiracies?

Whom do we need most for President, the candidates who are being financed by the interests Johnson drove out of California, or Johnson, who successfully opposed, routed and scattered and completely drove from power the forces that beset this country today, and whose tentacles reach into every State as they reached into California.

Senator Johnson is the first candidate for a generation whose services are actually based on a record of performance.

More Truth Than Poetry

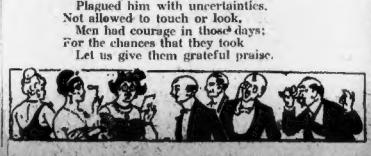
It Was a Mere Guess Then

By S. E. KISER

MANY changes have been wrought
Since our grandpas learned to woo,
Being in love's meshes caught
Doubtless feeling reckless, too.
Their delights were few and small,
That is, measured by our own;
They were never known to call
Ladies up by telephone;
Furthermore, they had to guess,
And in guessing be discreet,
For in their day woman's dress
Covered her from neck to feet.

WHEN our grandpas loved and sighed,
As enchanted lovers will,
They had little cause for pride,
And their tastes were simple still;
They were not inclined to flash
Money where the crowds could see;
They were stingy with their cash,
For, in truth, they had to be;
They could never tantalize
Lovely maidens hugged behind
Taxi drivers who were wise
And discreet and deaf and blind.

THERE was much they missed, alack!
Neither your grandsire nor mine
Ever saw his darling's back
Bared below the Dixie line.
He could guess that she was blessed
With a pair of useful knees,
But the style in which she dressed
Plagued him with uncertainties.
Not allowed to touch or look,
Men had courage in those days;
For the chances that they took
Let us give them grateful praise.



Ye TOWNE GOSSIP

Registered U. S. Patent Office.

By K. C. B.

DEAR K. C. B.—You and I are not acquainted, except I feel that I know you from reading your daily chatter for ever so long back, and because of that I will assume that I am acquainted with you and ask for some information which, if you will give through the medium of your column, may interest your multitude of readers as well as myself.

You seem to know everything, or at least pretend to, so won't you please advise why Liberty Bonds, which we all paid 100 per cent. for and were enthusiastic in doing so, should now be quoted in the open market at from 8 to 16 per cent. less.

The real reason, if there is a tangible one, is too deep for me, an ordinary layman, but perhaps you have inside knowledge, so why not disseminate it so that we "investors" can be as wise as you are. Sincerely yours, STEPHEN McSEE.

MY DEAR Stephen.
I ASKED a Wall street man,
IF HE could tell me,
WHAT YOU want to know,
AND HE said he could.
AND WHATEVER he told me,
I COULDN'T understand him.
BUT WHILE he was telling it,
IT SOUNDED all right.
AND IT may have been true.
AND I was looking wise.
AND HE thinks I'm smart.
AND I didn't want to tell him,
I HADN'T any idea.
WHAT HE was talking about.
AND I'M telling you this.
BECAUSE IN writing this column,
I ALWAYS aim
TO BE truthful and frank.
AND WHATEVER I know, ABOUT ANYTHING,
I'M ALWAYS willing
TO PASS it along.
AND I'VE looked in the papers,
SINCE I found out about them,
AND THEY'RE just the same price
AS THEY were before.
SO THE way I figure it,
IT DOESN'T much matter.
BECAUSE ANY way you take it,
THE FELLOW in between,
HE GETS the little end.
AND WHEN we have to buy,
THE SELLERS fix the price.
AND WHEN we have to sell,
THE BUYERS fix the price.
AND TALKING about bonds,
I SEE in the paper,
THAT NICKY Arnstein,
HAS GIVEN himself up,
AND WITH Nicky in jail,
OR WHEREVER they'll keep him,
THE CHANCES are,
THEY'LL FIGURE it out,
IT'S A whole lot safer,
TO HAVE bonds around.
THAN IF Nicky was loose,
AND THE price will go up.
THAT'S MY own idea,
AND I understand it,
AND IT sounds all right.

I THANK you.

CAUSE OF ELECTRIC LIGHT IN VACUUM

By Garrett P. Serviss

"As far as my elementary knowledge goes, I am unable to account for the following. If oxygen has to be present as the combustion agent for any light, heat or fire, why does the electric filament lamp give heat and light in a vacuum? J. S."

BECAUSE it is not combustion of the filament that produces the light, but electric resistance opposing the flow of the current of electrons through the filament. This resistance may be compared to friction, and, like friction, it produces heat.

On the other hand, combustion or burning, such as that of coal, or of a candle, is a case of chemical combination, and results in disintegration of the substance subjected to it, with evolution of heat, generally accompanied by the production of flame.

Another name for combustion is oxidation, since it consists in the chemical combination of oxygen with the carbon and other elements composing the substance burned. The products of this chemical combination are called oxides. After combustion the substance that has been subjected to this process no longer exists in its former state. It has been separated into smoke, vapor, gases and ashes.

In contrast to this, the substance of an electric lamp filament retains its shape and properties, and does not burn away while giving out heat and light. However, some combustion, or oxidation, occurs when an electric arc light is formed between carbon points, because the oxygen of the air is present around the glowing points, and unites with the carbon, thus consuming, or burning, it.

To prevent this wasting away of the carbons, they are enclosed so as to prevent free access of the air, and it is found that the carbons in enclosed arc lamps last twenty times as long as those that are not enclosed.

Even the filaments of ordinary electric lamps suffer slightly from oxidation if the bulbs are not thoroughly exhausted, and tungsten, whose high electric resistance makes it the best material for filaments, has so strong an affinity for oxygen that particular care must be exercised in excluding, as far as possible, the least trace of air from the bulbs.

Letters to the Editor

Building a "Nest"

Editor Boston American:

There are several million homeless people in this country. With the desire in their hearts for their own little homes, they are in a worse position than the birds, who are still able to build their own nests.

There are many more million people who may be homeless tomorrow—or next week—or next year, unless profiteering landlords are curbed, or put in jail.

There are millions of engaged couples, postponing the happy day, because they want a home of their own to go into instead of a tenement that they might afford, or an apartment that they cannot afford. They have visions of "love in a cottage," but H. C. L. appears as an insurmountable object. But there is a way—simple—and possible.

Let the State or the nation exempt from taxation all homes (with the emphasis on "homes") purchased or secured through a building or loan association or cooperative bank.

This will make home building easier. It will establish a definite schedule of payments for the participants—and it will stop profiteering. G.

Retail Merchants

Editor Boston American:

Permit me to say that I think you said the right thing and the truth in your editorial, "Have sympathy for Honest Retail Merchants," appearing in your paper of May 18. More editorials of this kind on this subject would tend to educate the buying public to lay the blame where the blame belongs, and exonerate the poor retailer from all the unjust criticism constantly lodged against him. I say this, not as a retailer, but as a student in practical economics. OTTO C. STEGEMAN, Cambridge.

COURAGE IS RENEWED THROUGH VISION

By Winifred Black

IT had been a hard day, the woman said, a day full of little worries and petty annoyances—and at the end of it, three letters.

One about the income tax, and her heart sank.

One about a property tax, and her soul shivered.

And one a bill from the grocer's, and she turned sick at heart.

Oh, yes, she had the money to pay these bills, or at least she could have it if she schemed and planned, and turned and twisted, and economized and gave up enough.

But in the end—what of it?

What did she get for all her work and all her worry and all her trials and all her tribulation? Nothing but more worry and more work and more trials and more tribulation.

Her children were growing up, fine, healthy, loyal, devoted children. If ever there were any, but the eldest was married and gone, and she couldn't lean on him any longer for counsel and comfort. His shoulders were burdened with as much as he could bear.

Trials and Tribulations

And the two youngsters were having trouble in school.

And the dinner wasn't very good that night, and after dinner two bores came to call, and one bore told all about his symptoms when he had the flu, and the other told about the trouble she was having with her cook, and they all talked about the high cost of living, and wondered what they'd do if rents went up higher, and—

When the woman went to bed she couldn't sleep at first.

And when she did sleep she dreamed of debt collectors and landlords and grocerymen as big as a house and teeth like wolves and bright and terrible eyes—and she woke up and cried a little. Then she went to sleep, and when she woke it was as if some one had come and had laid a gentle hand upon her forehead—and in her heart was ringing the refrain from the song they sang in church at Easter time:

"Consider the lilies, how they grow."

"Why, so they do!" said the woman. "So they do, the dear things. They're growing somewhere right this minute, I suppose."

"They toil not, neither do they spin."

"Why, so they don't," said the woman. "They don't do a thing."

"And yet Solomon, in all his glory——"

"Was not arrayed like one of these."

New-Born Lily

And upon her inward eye there shone the beauty of a new-born lily, fair and fragrant in a garden of green.

So sweet and tall and white it was—the lily. So slender, so graceful and so delicate, and yet what a courage it had to push its way up through the dark earth—all alone. What faith!

"Consider the lilies, how they grow"—over and over the woman said the comforting words, and somehow, in the soft gray of the early morning some one she knew long, long ago—some one loved deep and dear, and not forgotten—oh, never forgotten for one moment—never, never—seemed in white.

And the woman felt that she was not alone any more, and she rose and dressed herself and faced her little day with courage, with fortitude and with cheerful faith.

So out of the darkness comes sometimes to those who travail comfort and autcease from sorrow.

Stars and Stripes

A good deal of the red that some of the people of this country are seeing is merely in their eyes.

It is announced that clothes will be cheaper, but the announcement doesn't come from the people who are selling clothes.

* * *

Lightning, it is said, never strikes twice in the same place. That is one of the differences between lightning and an income tax.

Chile may become dry. The prospect should cause manufacturers of wood alcohol to develop an interest in our South American trade.
